The Filipinos.
The U. S. Not Responsible.
King Boris' Promise.
America, In Japan.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE SENATE joins the House over-ruling President Hoover's veto and our friends in the Philippines will decide about separating from their Uncle Sam, with certain restrictions and privileges attached to the separation.

The Filipinos will vote, and if they do not approve of the bill passed by Congress, their veto will be more effective than that of the President. It will stand and there will be no immediate change.

ACCORDING TO reporters, Gov. Roosevelt has said that President Hoover's policy in the Far East will be continued, because "the United States must uphold the sanctity of treaties."

Everybody admits that nations should live up to their treaties. But the average American does not believe that it is the business of the United States to go roaming over the world in Don Quixote fashion, TELLING other nations to live up to their treaties.

IF JAPAN doesn't keep its agreements with China, or its promises to the League of Nations, that is the business of China and the League of Nations. It isn't the business of this country. We didn't make the treaties and are not responsible for them.

Gov. Roosevelt knows well that he was elected President of the United States, not president of Japan, or protector of China.

ACCORDING TO the Osservatore Romano, organ of the Vatican, King Boris, of the eastern Greek church, promised when he married the Catholic daughter of King Victor Emmanuel that all children should be baptized and reared as Catholics.

Now Boris, in spite of his pledge, baptized the first child according to the rites of the Greek, or Orthodox eastern church.

ONCE UPON a time, the world believed that this would make a great difference to the baby. The theory, not complimentary to divine power, was that if you were wrongly baptized it was impossible to go to Heaven. Few people, probably, believe now that divine justice would treat a small baby as severely as that, for something not its fault.

Once upon a time the belief that baptism was necessary to salvation was useful, as nearly all beliefs are, originally.

IN THOSE days, it was legal to expose children in the public square in Rome. They could be picked up and raised as slaves, or eaten by dogs. The early Christians warned Christian mothers that such babies, not baptized, could not go to heaven, and the mothers would be responsible.

Therefore, the mothers brought them to be baptized, and once baptized, they were Christians, and could no longer be exposed to the dogs, which was ingenious.

You read about that in Lecky's "History of European Morals."

IN YOKOHAMA, the Singer Sewing Machine Company plant, owned in the United States, temporarily managed by a Canadian, and with an Englishman as permanent manager, is raided by dissatisfied Japanese workers, all property, in reach, destroyed.

The American ambassador says the police didn't interfere with the Japanese raiders.

What interests Americans is the fact that a Canadian is sent to arrange labor troubles in Japan for an American concern, where an Englishman is permanent manager for American owners.

Perhaps, and probably, that is done because Britain has the reputation of looking after her people in foreign lands.

IT WILL interest you to learn from Dr. Blanshard, teacher of philosophy in Swarthmore College, that blushes are only "sidetracked" thought. Blood rushing to the brain is part of the thinking process. Blood rushing to the face, causing a flush, means that the mind objects to some word or thought and would rather blush about it than think about it.

It is not important now, for, according to general report, blushing has gone out of fashion in this cocktail age.

THE FRENCH wine crop is off 220,000,000 gallons this year, mildew in the vines, and bad weather, held responsible. It is a serious matter in France, where health depends largely on good red wine. The French find comfort in constantly increasing grape production in Algeria, across the Mediterranean.

When and IF this country changes from its gin-whisky-cocktail habits to the lighter wines, arrangements should be made to encourage grape-growing in California, that possesses Algeria's climate and many other kinds of climate, also in Ohio, New York and other states, where grapes are grown successfully.

Banker No Love Pirate, Says Wife of Man Asking $200,000

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—James A. Stillman, former National City Bank president whose misadventures have swirled in and out of court for many years, can count on Marjorie Rochefort to stand by him in the $200,000 alienation of affections suit brought by her husband, Luc, Montreal politician.

Mrs. Rochefort disclosed this today in the wake of revelation that

M. Rochefort

Rochefort had started action against the banker in Brooklyn, inferentially naming Stillman as a "love pirate."

Rochefort's contention, revealed in court argument, that Stillman stole the love of his wife, hasn't much basis, according to the Montrealer's wife. There wasn't any love left to steal, she intimated. She said:

"I think that my husband's lawsuit is an outrage. I lost whatever love I had for him years ago. Our life was just one separation after another.

"In the spring of 1931, after another one of those separations, Luc was out of work and

4 AVELLA MEN WIN PAROLES

Four Avella businessmen were paroled for two years after pleading no defense in Federal Court today to charges of aiding and abetting in misapplication of funds of the closed Licoln National Bank of Avella.

They were Frank R. Westlake, a former teller in the bank and a stockholder in the Hopewell Oil and Gas Company; Charles R. McFadden, treasurer of the Hopewell company; William W. Sutherland, a stockholder in the Avella Investment Company, and Bert B. Irwin, a vice president of the Hopewell company.

The four were described as "victims of circumstances." It was explained they had signed individual notes totaling $30,000 at the request of Lyde M. Irwin, former cashier of the bank. Irwin in 1931 was sentenced to three years for misapplication of $157,000 of the bank's funds.

Operate on Tenor To Increase Range

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Tito Schipa, operatic tenor, will undergo an operation on his throat tomorrow which may add two to four notes to his voice range, Dr. Edward Kellogg said today. Enlarged tonsils will be removed and an adjustment will be made in the "epiglottal space" in Schipa's throat.

The physician hopes to increase the top range of Schipa's voice from its present B flat above high C to E flat above high C.

Ex-Mayor Walker Moving to Cannes

NICE, France, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Former Mayor Walker, of New York, who has been at Cap D'Antibes for several weeks, is moving to Cannes, where he has taken an apartment for a year. His recovery from an attack of the grip is almost complete.

Betty Compton, the actress, also is moving to Cannes. She will occupy the villa "Beau Geste," placed at her disposal by friends in England.

The Shameful 72nd Congress

NOTHING CAN MITIGATE the performance now going on in the United States Senate! That a body which occupies the place of the Senate in our constitutional system should give itself over, by virtue of rules of its own adoption, to a FORMAL AND METHODICAL WASTE of time in complete disregard of the public business, which was never more pressing, is the shame of shames:

IT TRANSCENDS INFAMY!

One of the indictments of the outgoing administration was the refusal of President Hoover to call Congress into special session so that vital problems which would not be solved without legislative action might have such aid.

Well! Congress is now in session, but what of it?

The problems crowding for solution have not lessened in number. They have increased.

The condition of the national BUDGET grows steadily worse.

There has been NO effective CURTAILMENT of government EXPENDITURE in the face of the steady diminution of government receipts—NO sincere and comprehensive EFFORT AT RETRENCHMENT.

With all the unused power of the government, there has been NO extension of PUBLIC WORKS commensurate with the need of the unemployed and destitute for LIFE-SUSTAINING WORK.

Relief for the farmer still waits upon Congressional action, although his plight is known to be beyond endurance.

Federal taxation is in a muddle which grows MORE CHAOTIC each day. No proposal or scheme of taxation thus far made is even theoretically capable of producing the revenue which the country needs—even assuming that business and incomes can bear the burden of the discriminatory and excessive imposts with which ignorant demagogy contents itself.

WITH EVERYTHING TO BE DONE, NOTHING IS DONE.

NOT SATISFIED, however, with its FAILURE which is utter and unqualified, IN EVERY FIELD—its inability to improve the "unforgiving hours" and utilize in the people's service the time at its command—the Senate for a week has regaled A DESPERATE COUNTRY with the spectacle of a FILIBUSTER.

We say the Senate advisedly, because the responsibility for this degraded and abandoned exhibition cannot be made to rest exclusively upon the impudent and shallow creature who is conducting it.

A deliberative body which will submit supinely to a set of rules which makes such a filibuster possible, cannot absolve itself from participation in the disgrace.

As to the Glass bill, an orderly and intelligent discussion of its provisions would afford the light needed for a decision as to its merits.

The country would like to hear from Senator Glass, who is one of the men in public life it trusts.

That our banking situation, with its appalling record of bank failures, needs corrective legislation is self-evident.

WHY DO WE NOT GET FORWARD WITH THIS IMPORTANT MATTER?

The answer—incensing and humiliating—is that THE FULL LEGISLATIVE POWER OF THE UNITED STATES SENATE IS IN THE HANDS OF HI-JACKERS.

The public interest means nothing to them. Public opinion is defied. The voices of FORTY-EIGHT sovereign states are refused all hearing.

"STICK-'EM-UP" has become the order of the day in the Senate, and naught but the ranting of the legislative hi-jacker is heard in its aisles.

How can such a thing be, you ask—fellow-citizens. Only by your tolerance!

BUT IF WE CAN READ SIGNS ARIGHT, THAT WILL NOT BE FOR LONG!

FILIBUSTER IN SENATE BROKEN

Voluntary Agreement Reached Following Cloture Defeat

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Volunteer action succeeded where force failed in the Senate today, and the protracted filibuster against the Glass bank bill gave way.

By a lone vote, the attempt of the Democratic leadership to impose cloture—limiting debate sharply—lost out. The count was 58 for to 30 against, meaning defeat, as the margin fell short of the required two-thirds.

TURBULENT SCENE

There followed a turbulent scene of exchanges between Robinson, the Democratic floor leader; his foe and filibuster chieftain—Huey Long, of Louisiana, and another filibusterer—Thomas, of Oklahoma.

Once quiet settled, Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, proposed the unanimous consent agreement to restrict each Senator to speak on hour on the bill and half an hour on amendments.

It went through amid applause.

Both parties divided on the cloture vote, many having claimed in advance that they opposed the rule in principle, but were anxious that the Senate not be held up to ridicule. Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, voted for cloture, while his colleague, Senator Davis, voted against it.

Most of the Republicans voting against the cloture rule were western independents, but they were joined by three "lame duck" leaders, Watson, Smoot and Moses.

Senator Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, charged in the Senate yesterday that lame duck Republicans were "conspiring" to aid the filibuster.

ACCUSES G. O. P.

During his exchange today with Senators Long and Thomas, Senator Robinson charged that the Republican leadership had "contribuated to this effort to make the Senate ridiculous in order to embarrass the incoming administration." He added:

"The United States Senate ought to show it can do business or take the censure being heaped on it by the citizens of this country.

"The question a tthis time is whether, when the country is suffering from a depression, the Senate can function."

After the Borah motion carried such confusion filled the chamber that Vice President Curtis had to stand and shout for order, banging his gavel with all his strength.

The Senate then tackled the controversial branch banking feature of the measure, discussing the question of which one of several amendments to the provision permitting national banks to have state-wide branches should be taken up first.

RUTH JUDD RE-ENACTS SLAYINGS

Tense Drama Marks Resumption of Court Hearing

By EDWARD LABOWITCH
International News Service.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 19.—Winnie Ruth Judd today dramatically re-enacted the death struggle that preceded the "trunk murders" of Agnes Anne Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson.

She shuddered in horror as the gun she wielded the night of the slayings was introduced at the preliminary hearing of J. J. (Happy Jack) Halloran, charged as her accessory.

Handing the gun to Mrs. Judd, Halloran's attorney, Frank O. Smith, said:

"Now tell us just how you gained possession of the gun."

The pretty nurse, under sentence to die next month, recoiled as Smith urged:

"Now take the gun."

She screamed:

"I don't want to. I don't see why I have to take it. I've told you all about it. Sammy and I were grappling on the floor.

"We were fighting—fighting—fighting."

Smith asked:

"How far away was the gun from Sammy's head when the shot was fired?"

"We were in each other's arms. It was close. We were both in the doorway on the floor."

Then her voice rose as she yelled:

"I am not on trial for Hedvig Samuelson."

The re-enactment of the death struggle was a startling prelude to a surprise move by Halloran's counsel to strike out all of Mrs.

DOUBLES OFFER FOR LOST GEMS

The reward for the return of the $50,000 pearl necklace lost by Madelaine Alexander, daughter of Dr. Maitland Alexander, of Sewickley Heights, today stood at $10,000—an increase of $5,000 over the first offer.

Miss Alexander, a young society leader whose father is the pastor emeritus of the First Presbyterian Church, discovered the absence of the string of 75 pearls after she and an escort had returned from a theater in Ambridge five weeks ago.

The reward is being offered by G. F. Ferrier, an insurance adjuster. An alleged plot to extort $15,000 from Ferrier for the return of the pearls was frustrated last week.

Court Order Divides Custody of Boy, 10

Andrew A. Schmid, Jr., 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Schmid, will spend two evenings and one afternoon a week with his father and will eat alternate Sunday dinners with each of his parents, as a result of a court order made today by Judge Elder W. Marshall.

The court ordered the mother, Mrs. Stella K. Schmid, of 3227 Perrysville avenue, to have the boy ready to leave when the father came to the front door. It was the outgrowth of a habeas corpus proceedings started by the father after Mrs. Schmid filed a divorce libel.

Magee left the hospital a few months ago after recovering from injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

RAIDS RESUMED IN COUNTY

Seven squads of county detectives continued the drive against alleged liquor "joints" today.

Two men were arrested in raids on the North Side and one in Wilkins Township. Other squads were in action in other parts of the county. Seven complaints in Braddock were being investigated.

A raid at 531 Brighton road revealed two 'beer gardens" in one house, the detectives said. The squad was led by Detective Frank Malone. David Jackson, 42, was arrested as the alleged proprietor of an establishment on two floors of the house, and Charles Fitch, 45, as the alleged proprietor of the other.

Another squad led by Detective John T. Burke raided a dwelling at 3 Hill street, Harrison Place, Wilkins Township, and arrested Casiamo Rulla, 38. Rullo was alleged to have been operating a 50-gallon still. The detectives reported confiscation of the still and five gallons of liquor.

NEAR-RIOT MARKS MEET

Police Called as Shift To Tiny Room Bars Waiting Throng

The Battle of the Resignations blew up today with no resignations.

County Commissioners C. C. McGovern and C. M. Barr and William D. Mansfield, on the one side, are still County Commissioners, and Controller Robert G. Woodside, who made charges against them, is still Controller.

And a crowd of 300 or more who stormed the Courthouse was cheated out of what promised to be an interesting show.

STAGE ALL SET

The stage was set in dramatic style, and with an attempt at much formality by Col. McGovern, when Woodside walked in, read a prepared statement, tossed five affidavits on the Commissioners' desk and strolled out.

The affidavits, given by neighbors of Woodside in the Wexford district, were offered to support Woodside's allegation that the Commissioners had set up a system of espoinage aimed at other county officials.

The crowd didn't like the way things turned out. In the first place, the spectators were barred from the meeting—barred because the Commissioners shifted the hearing to a small conference room.

But the crowd raised such a mild riot in the lobbies that women fainted and extra police were called. So the Commissioners allowed the people to park in the big hearing room, which adjoined the "courtroom."

CROWD IN FURORE

They saw nothing and heard nothing. But they raised lusty yelling voices to the roof. One favorite yell was:

"We want the trained animals!"

After the hearing had "flopped," the Commissioners were roundly booed by the audience when they passed back to the hearing room to resume budget sessions.

In his prepared statement Woodside said he was more interested in dealing with the budget. Furthermore, he added, he didn't believe the Commissioners had a right to hold such a hearing. Then he repeated his charges that the Commissioners were extravagant, that their audit was expensive and useless, that some money was being spent for "improper purposes."

At the budget session this afternoon Woodside appeared before a large crowd and was greeted by shouts. He said:

"I have just heard you are waiting around for a hearing. The only hearing that was to be held has been held. There will be nothing more today. I don't know why it was held in a smaller room. I didn't select that. I ask you all who are not interested in the budget, as good

SERANG, Java, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The volcano Krakatoa, which which was active for a time last February, has burst into full eruption, throwing lava to enormous heights. The uninterrupted flow somettimes shoots 3,000 to 4,500 feet in the air.

City's Street Lights Dimmed for Economy

The city is dimming its "bright light" districts to conform with a reduction in the appropriation for street lighting in the 1933 budget.

Public Works Director Edward G. Lang said today it was necessary for the department to cut its light bill approximately $125,000. Department officials and the Duquesne Light Company now are making a survey in the districts where they believe lights can be removed or the candle power reduced.

Lang said residential districts usually were not over-lighted and probably would not be affected. Some lights may be removed from boulevards, he said. There are about 16,500 electric and approximately 3,500 gas or gasoline lamps throughout the city, according to Lang. About 648 will be taken out or their power changed, he said.

The economy measure does not apply to traffic lights, since they are under the Public Safety Department.

LEAGUE PROBES CHARGE JAPAN 'FORTIFIES' ISLANDS

TOKIO DELEGATE QUESTIONED BY COMMISSION

Harbor Improvements Aid Submarines, U. S. Hints

International News Service.

GENEVA, Jan. 19. — Certain "harbor improvements" undertaken by Japan in the Caroline Islands, part of the German Pacific possessions ceded to her care at the end of the war, have been made the subject of intensive investigation by the League of Nations mandates commission, it was learned today.

Publication of the commission's report, expected by the end of the week, was awaited with keen interest. The Carolinas, as well as the Mariana Islands, also placed under Japanese mandate, are strategically located possessions east of the Philippine Islands.

AMERICAN CLAIMS

Nombumi Ito, Japanese delegate on the commission, was approached following a speech by Wallace Murray, of the American State Department, which was supplemented by remarks from a "State Department spokesman" declaring that the harbor improvements facilitated submarine maneuvers.

It was assumed in Geneva that the Washington spokesman was Under-secretary of State William R. Castle, an expert on Far Eastern affairs.

Questioned by the commission in closest secrecy, Ito was understood to have denied that the harbor improvements were in the nature of fortification measures, pointing out that the islands are extensively used in sugar traffic.

Diplomatic authorities declared that fortification of mandated islands constitutes a violation of the treaties assigning former German possessions to various nations. Under the terms of these treaties, Japan was given mandate over more than 600 small islands in the Pacific.

Japan Guards Americans After Envoy's Protest

TOKIO, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—Acting on the demand of United States Ambassador Joseph Clark Grew for adequate protection of American lives and property, Japanese authorities today assigned heavy detachments of police to guard the homes of officers of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, whose Yokohama branch was wrecked by strikers.

Scores of police were assigned to the wrecked plant to prevent any further acts of sabotage. The strike leading to the attack upon the Yokohama plant has now extended to six cities.

Meanwhile, officials of the concern said they had not heard from the United States Embassy since Ambassador Grew lodged his protest with Foreign Minister Uchida against the attack, but the stationing of police at the scene proved that the complaint had borne fruit.

Jap Troops Prepare For Big Drive

PEIPING, Jan. 19. — (INS.) — With mobolization of Japanese Manchukuo forces complete, the order for renewal of Japan's drive against Jehol province was tensely awaited today.

Reports from Chinese scouts indicated the Japanese advance might start almost momentarily, and Chinese commanders throughout North China prepared to resist the expected invasion bitterly.

The mantle of snow covering North China and Jehol province appeared to give the gray-clad Chinese troops a decided advantage over the khaki-clad Japanese troops.

Stationed atop numerous mountain passes throughout the disputed province, the Chinese troops were scarcely visible because of the snow, while the Japanese could easily be discerned, as their uniforms contrasted vividly with the white background.

TRUNK KILLINGS RE-ENACTED

Judd's testimony as the state's star witness against Halloran.

Halloran's attorney presented a motion alleging Mrs. Judd was "concealing material facts," "repeatedly committing perjury" and "was physically and mentally diseased to the extent that she was incompetent to testify."

Earlier in the day another surprise action by Halloran's attorney had enabled counsel for Mrs. Judd to be present at today's session. Judge C. C. Niles recessed court until late this afternoon, when he will rule on the defense motion.

Tears streamed down the former judge's face as he made the plea to allow Mrs. Judd's lawyers to return. His earnestness matched that of Mrs. Judd yesterday when she brought tears to many eyes as she recounted her fight with her two nurse friends.

Mrs. Judd's story of the fight with Agnes and "Sammy," which culminated in their slaying, poured from her lips in a furious torrent yesterday. Battling to overcome hysteria, which twice forced adjournment of court, she told—incoherently at times, but with a sincerity that brought tears to the spectators who packed the little courtroom, and even to hardened court attaches—the story that she claims has been hidden in her heart since that tragic night, more than a year ago.

Jealousy that flamed from a casual conversation into a battle for life, in which two others lost, and as a result of which she must pay with her own, was the background, she said.

Throughout her recital flamed her bitterness against Halloran.

Mrs. Judd testified:

"Aime said she was going to tell my husband about Jack coming over to see me every night. Then I told her I would tell about she and Jack staying at the Plaza Hotel in San Francisco.

"We argued, and Sammy started to yell at me, saying I had no right to say such things. Then Sammy came after me with a gun. I grabbed a breadknife and stabbed her twice after she shot me in the hand.

"Then Anne came up screaming: 'Shoot her, Sammy! Shoot her, Sammy!'

"Sammy and I grappled and the gun went off. It was in Sammy's hand and it shot her in the chest. We rolled on the floor and Anne came after me with the ironing board.

"She was braining me with that ironing board. I got the gun from Sammy and as Anne hit me again with the board I shot her."

Superstition 'Bunk' To Pinchot, Gets Card No. 13

Gov. Gifford Pinchot says he is not superstitious, and to prove it, he asked for and received police courtesy card No. 13 from Public Safety Director James M. Clark. The card was sent to him on Friday, January 13, Director Clark revealed today.

Clark, en route home from Bermuda, stopped in Harrisburg and called on the Governor. Their talk drifted to police courtesy cards and Clark mentioned that he never had issued card No. 13 because of superstition. Pinchot remarked that he was not superstitious and said:

"Director, if you have that card left, send it along."

Planning Divorce

MRS. HORACE DODGE

ROOSEVELT OFF TO SEE HOOVER

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt left today for Washington, where he will hold an important conference tomorrow morning on foreign affairs with President Hoover. He was accompanied, among others, by Norman H. Davis, who is prominently mentioned as possibly the next Secretary of State.

Before seeing Mr. Hoover tomorrow, Mr. Roosevelt is expected to receive a call at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington late today from Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, with whom the President-elect recently discussed the far eastern situation at length.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. — (INS.)—The whole field of foreign affairs will be explored by President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt in their conference tomorrow, the common objective being a continuity of American policy to bridge the change of administrations.

The paramount topic they will discuss, however, is the forthcoming world economic conference and American policy in relation thereto.

'BUY AMERICAN' BILL IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. — (INS.)—The House bill committing the United States government to a "Buy American" policy in its purchase of supplies was reported favorably today by the Senate Commerce Committee.

The mandatory provisions of the bill were strengthened by the committee, which struck out the qualifying clause "so far as practicable and unless the cost is unreasonable."

In lieu of this clause, the committee inserted a proviso that American goods, to be eligible under the mandate, must exist in "commercial quantities and of a satisfactory quality."

Senator Johnson (Rep.), of California, the committee chairman, predicted the bill would be approved without serious opposition in the Senate.

BOY'S ILLNESS MYSTERY

Physicians at Mercy Hospital today continued their efforts to diagnose the strange illness of Roger Morgan, 8, of Fourth street, Freeport, who, despite three blood transfusions in three weeks, was steadily growing weaker.

The boy's blood count was decreasing daily, it was said. To keep the young victim alive physicians said it would be necessary to perform transfusions twice weekly.

The boy's parents appealed for blood donors in Vandergrift several days ago when the supply of suitable blood became exhausted in Freeport.

More than a score of men volunteered and yesterday six submitted to blood tests.

STILLMAN GETS WOMAN'S AID IN SUIT

ill. Out of the goodness of my heart, I took him in.

"We both slept under the same roof, but there was no closer relationship between us. There hasn't been any for more than seven years.

"Mr. Stillman can count on me if he needs me to tell the truth in this case. And the story I will tell won't be of any help to Luc Rochefort."

Rochefort, twice a candidate for mayor of the Canadian city, charged the 62-year-old millionaire carried on a romance with Mrs. Rochefort, which began in a Long Island city apartment and moved to Cuba.

Mrs. Rochefort is the former Marjorie Nye, of Boston and Cambridge, Mass.

GIFTS TO WIFE CHARGED

Rochefort also asserted Stillman alienated his wife's affections by gifts and financial presents, rendering her dissatisfied with their life together.

Malcolm Sumner, attorney for Stillman, arguing a libel action brought by Rochefort against the banker, declared the alienation action was baseless and that the Montreal politician knew of and encouraged the relationship between his wife and Stillman.

The libel action, Sumner said, was merely a "squeeze play" to force Stillman to settle the alienation matter out of court. A motion to examine Stillman in the libel suit is pending before Supreme Court Justice Edward Riegelman.

Stillman's counsel termed the action "little short of blackmail" and demanded the court censure Alfred Becker, attorney for Rochefort.

With revelation of the suit, all New York sat back to await January 25, the date set by the court for filing of all papers in the case.

STILLMAN TO FIGHT

Stillman, through Sumner, announced he would fight the case right up to the Supreme Court and entered a general denial of the Montrealer's allegations.

The banker was reported visiting "down South" by representatives at his home.

Sumner, however, issued a statement on behalf of his client, which said in part:

"The depression appears to have greatly increased, almost to epidemic proportions, litigation of this general character—much of it is without any real merit. Mr. Stillman's attitude in these Rochefort suits—which are without foundation in fact—may help to discourage, if only to a limited extent, the unfortunately growing tendency to make men similarly situated to himself the seemingly preferred class for this type of nefarious attack."

Interrupts Hunt for Clean Shirt to Tell Troubles

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—The man who is suing James A. Stillman for $200,000—

The man who used to be a banker and twice ran for mayor of Montreal—

The man who for 13 years was in Canada's "Who's Who" and who says his ancestors came over with Champlain—

This man was located today busily at work on his invention of a paper umbrella to sell for 10 cents.

Said Luc Rochefort, searching his bureau for a clean shirt:

"It ought to make me a fortune. We thought of using tinfoil at first, but it didn't work. The alienation suit? Oh, yes."

And then the dapper French-Canadian, who charges that Stillman stole his wife's love, told his side of the story, interspersed with remarks about the future of paper umbrellas and the importance of tracing one's ancestry back to the eighteenth century.

CARRIES AGE WELL

Luc Rochefort, slickly groomed, concealing well his 44 years, was found by a reporter in a one-room-and-bath apartment in Sunnyside, L. I. He appeared unworried about the furore aroused by his suit; in fact, the one thing that clouded his day was the prospect that he wouldn't find that clean shirt. He said:

"Times are hard, you know."

But about the alienation suit, He said:

"I loved my wife. Well, yes, we did separate a lot, but I always came back. Haven't seen her for a year now, though, since she went to Havana with Stillman.

"We were in love, all right. We had a son, but he died in infancy."

Rochefort denied the charges of his wife that he conceived the idea of obtaining money from Stillman. There was no conspiracy as far as he knew, he insisted.

FINDS LETTERS

It was while his wife was in Havana, where Stillman also was, that he first became suspicious, he said.

"I found some letter in the house and that's how I knew it was Stillman. I never knew the man. I wouldn't have known anything about it but for those letters."

He was asked about the charge that after Stillman began calling at the apartment he demanded money from his wife under threats of going to the banker. He said:

"Why, they claim I was broke at the time when the truth is that I had a splendid job. I was working for the Reynolds Metal Company. They were interested in my umbrella idea.

"My people have been in Canada since 1700. My ancestors came over with Champlain."

(Historical note: Champlain first landed in Canada in 1603. He died in 1635).

Rochefort has been living in Queens for a year and a half, working most of the time on the oil paper umbrella. He is a medium sized man, is proud of his clothes and has a bureau drawer filled with toilet articles. He was asked:

"Do you intend to go on with the suit?"

Still hunting for the clean shirt, he replied:

Brown Rites Today At McCauley Home

BEAVER, Pa., Jan. 19.—Coincident with the funeral services for Bradway Brown, slain social registerite at his mother's home in Moorestown, N. J., today services at the same hour will be held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. S. H. McCauley, parents of the former Ruth McCauley, Brown's widow. Dr. and Mrs. McCauley because of illness were unable to accompany their daughter when she was summoned by news of the death of her husband.

BROWN BURIAL SPURS MURDER CLUE SEARCH

Suicide Theory Hit By Doctor and Family

By DOROTHY DUCAS
International News Service.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Jan. 19.—The secret of Bradway Brown's violent death will not be buried with him in Friends Cemetery today, the fourth anniversary of his wedding.

On the contrary, when Brown's body is lowered into a grave, it will be the signal for the first intensive effort to determine whether he died by his own hand.

As his wife, the former Ruth McCauley, of Beaver, Pa., prepared to walk behind his coffin in Moorestown, as four years ago she walked beside him to the altar, investigators redoubled their efforts to clear up the mystery which has assumed the proportions of a peculiarly stubborn murder within the last 24 hours.

SUICIDE THEORY

Three physicians reported one of the body wounds could not have been inflicted by Brown himself, accidentally, as had been thought. Dr. Daniel F. Remer, county physician, explained both of the deep wounds were made while Brown was standing up, so he could not have stumbled and fallen on the gun on his way into the house.

This evidence alone made a suicide theory rather slim, but it had been tottering ever since Brown's family declared they were anxious to "find out who did this thing" immediately after the burial.

The mound of conflicting evidence has grown until detectives under Chief Ellis H. Parker, of Burlington County, have lost their assurance the publishing executive fired the shots—two, three or four—that ended his life, but gave him time to walk 40 feet with two bullets in his chest.

PARKER'S VIEW

Parker still was inclined to believe the man's physical condition, disclosed by the autopsy as very serious, was the key to the mystery.

Prosecutor Howard Eastman is actively associated in the investigation, a circumstance regarded as significant. He is waiting for the results of a chemical analysis of the stomach contents of Brown, which should be available today. Evidence the young man visited a speakeasy before he came home Monday evening has given rise to reports he was followed.

RUTH SILENT ON CABINET JOB

Mentioned as President-elect Roosevelt's possible appointee as Secretary of the Interior, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, retiring Congresswoman from Florida, today declined to comment on the subject during a brief stop here.

Mrs. Owen spoke before the Pittsburgh Thursday Morning Lecture Series group in William Penn Hotel.

The Congresswoman quickly closed the possible cabinet post subject with:

"There is no appropriate expression I can make."

Mrs. Owen will retire from Congress, March 4, after serving two terms. The greatest gratification in her work, she said, will have been gained in the passing of legislation providing for the government's acceptance of the Everglade National Park, a natural tropical setting in the southwest tip of Florida measuring 50 by 60 miles. The bill already has been passed by the Senate and the Public Lands Committee of the House.

She voted both for repeal of the dry law and beer, Mrs. Owen explained, because it was the mandate of her people. Her successful opponent had been elected on the platform of outright repeal, while she asked a referendum by the constituents to determine their attitude.

Punch Petters, Church Guide Urges Girls

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—Girls—good girls, that is—if your boy friend should ever try to start a petting party, don't hesitate to employ fisticuffs. If he parks his car in a secluded spot and turns out the light, give him a "swift punch."

Such was the advice gleaned today from a "question and answer" manual issued by the Congregational Church as a guide for young people. The book is being circulated among the denomination's schools.

One question reads:

"What can a girl do when she is out with a boy in a car and he stops along the road and turns off the lights."

The answer:

"A girl should insist on having the lights turned on again and be driven home. If the boy resists, the girl should punctuate her remarks with a swift punch. A good girl should know that stopping a car is preliminary to a petting party."

Similar answers are given in the manual for "How should men carry on with women?" and "How should a girl entertain a boy in her own home?"

Hiccoughing Girl Kept Alive by Oxygen

NEW KENSINGTON, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—A new variety of those puzzling hiccoughs attacks had doctors at Citizens General Hospital baffled today.

Miss Bertha Elkins, 16, of Edmunds, Pa., the patient, hiccoughs only when she is awake or in the presence of visitors.

So serious has her condition become since she entered the hospital on January 7 that oxygen i being administered regularly by doctors to take the place of he interrupted breathing.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Daisy Jost, 15, had stopped sneezing today.

The girl had been sneezing with unusual frequency for more than a week, on several days at the rate of four times a minute.

Her condition today was practically normal except for a slight temperature. Dr. William E. Henske, attending physician, said this possibly was due to the serum he administered.

Since her case was first reported her doctor has received 128 suggestions of possible remedies.

SHOWDOWN IN COUNTY WAR 'FLOPS' AS THRONGS JEER

SHIFT TO TINY CHAMBER BARS HUNDREDS

Woodside Apologizes To Barr; Hearing Then Delayed

citizens of Allegheny County, to retire from the room."

There were more shouts, and a voice demanded:

"Why don't you finish what you started?"

Woodside walked out, saying:

"Never mind."

WOODSIDE SUED

Woodside's charges produced one repercussion before the hearing started. Mrs. Georgetta H. Wehner, of Allison Park, filed notice of a suit in trespass against him—presumably on his charges that "a Mrs. Wehner" had tried to get his neighbors to testify falsely that he used county materials to improve his farm near Wexford.

Commissioner Barr objected strenuously to postponing the hearing. Woodside suggested that his solicitor and the Commissioners' solicitor might get together and fix up another hearing after the budget had been disposed of—but Barr objected, and McGovern echoed him. However, McGovern and Mansfield finally voted, with Barr dissenting, to a postponement, McGovern adding:

"But if the Controller isn't ready I'm willing to let him set a date."

Barr was victorious in another direction. Woodside explained that he had meant no slur last week when he referred to Mrs. Wehmer as Barr's "girl friend." He said:

"I didn't mean it to be taken wrong and I am very sorry any wrong meaning was taken from it."

STATEMENT DROPPED

McGovern and Mansfield, with high praise for Barr's private and public life, then moved that Woodside's reference of last week be stricken from the record. And Mansfield added:

"I hope the newspapers and radio give as much publicity that Mr. Woodside has made an apology as they did when the reference was made.

In opening the hearing McGovern read a long statement in which Woodside's charges were enumerated and denied. He suggested that witnesses be sworn, that all testimony be taken under oath.

He suggested that if Woodside had proof of a spy system he should give such proof to the District Attorney.

CHARGE REPEATED

The affidavits presented by Woodside were not read at the hearing.

Homer Ford, of Wexford-Bayne road, neighbor of Controller Woodside, repeated his statements, published exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph, alleging a Mrs. Wehner came to his farm and offered him a county job, questioning him concerning materials delivered to Woodside's farm.

Peter J. Altmyer, of Wexford, said Mrs. Wehner questioned him about the "stuff" that was hauled to the Woodside farm and told him:

"We are anxious to get all this to have something on him and we want to find out about all this."

Julius L. Hague, Rochester road, Franklin Township, about two miles from Woodside's farm, said a woman who said she was Mrs. Wehner came to him in September, 1932, and asked him if he knew anything about private driveways being "put in" on the roadwork under the former County Commissioners, and advised him:

"Well, we have got something on Woodside."

WOMAN'S TESTIMONY

Mrs. Bernice Vandervort described a conversation she overheard between a Mr. Heim and her father-in-law last summer during which, she said, Heim disclosed that:

"McGovern was going to give anyone a job in the county if they would testify against Mr. Woodside that county materials were used on the farm."

A woman asked Charlie Neeley, who lives near the Woodside farm, if he had worked for the Controller, his statement said.

THE COUNTY COMMISSION (M'GOVERN, MANSFIELD AT FAR RIGHT) HEARING THE WOODSIDE CHARGES "IN COURT" TODAY

Woodside Charges and Commissioners' Replies

The charges of Controller Woodside, as phrased by Commissioner McGovern, and the Commissions' answers, were read by McGovern at today's hearing. Here they are:

The Charge: The Board of County Commissioners has so far utterly failed to evince an intention to pursue a constructive policy in the administration of the affairs of Allegheny County.

The Answer: We do not understand exactly what the Controller means by the words used; but in the face of unprecedented difficulties, we have provided better and more emonomical county government than any recent county administration.

The charge: The Board of County Commissioners has improvidently expended the public moneys in the employment of the associates of Main & Co.

The answer: The cost to the county of the employment of some of Main & Co.'s personnel may appear to be high, yet this employment has, on the whole, been very profitable to the county; this employment would not now be necessary if the County Controller had properly performed the duties of his office during his incumbency thereof; the previous special audit conducted under the supervision of the County Controller, completely failed to suggest any remedies for the evils in the administration of the county's affairs, or even to disclose, on any substantial scale, that such evils existed.

The charge:

Main & Company's personnel is now doing work on current business, which should be done by the County's own personnel.

The answer:

To some extent this is true; in some cases it is because the personnel of the Controller's office has demonstrated that it either cannot or will not do this work in such a way as to protect the County's interests; in other cases it is because the current assignment is related to the current completion of past transactions; in all cases it is merely temporary, until a method and personnel can be built up that will enable this work to be well done by the County's own employees.

The Charge: The Board of County Commissioners has improvidently expended money in the maintenance of the Division of Claims and Investigations. The activities of this division should be limited to current business.

The Answer: The Division of Claims and Investigations, under the present Board of County Commissioners has function and is functioning more efficiently than at any other time in recent county history; except for inconsiderable exceptions, its activities have been and are now devoted to current business; the bulk of the information which has come to it of improper practices in the past administration of the county's affairs has come to it voluntarily, brought by persons sincerely interested in putting an end to abuses which prevailed in the past.

The Charge: The Board of County Commissioners has adopted an espionage manner of carrying on public business, and has put into effect a practice of having investigators offer jobs to those who will agre to give false testimony to blacken the character of citizens not in accord with the Board of County Comsioners; in other words, the Board of County Commissioners is charged with the crimes of subornation of perjury and conspiracy to defame.

THE ANSWER: So far as this charge implies participation, knowledge or acquiescence of any of the County Commissioners, the charge is untrue; the County Commissioners believe it to be untrue in every respect; credible evidence of the participation in such practices by any county employe under the control of the Commissioners will bring about his immediate separation from the service. If the County Controller has information of any such offenses and believes that information, the Commissioners believe it to be his duty to lay it before the District Attorney.

The Charge: The Board of County Commissioners has done things requiring the County Controller to go the limit to protect it in the interest of the taxpayers.

The Answer: Noting that the protection which the Controller claims to have furnished them was, he says, in the interest of the taxpayers, the County Commissioners do not understand what the County Controller means by the words used; but the County Commissioners have not jointly or severelly, done anything requiring the Controller's protection, have not requested his protection, and do not desire it.

MOVIE ROYALTY OUSTER HINTED

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Hollywood's collection of counts, dukes, barons and others of foreign birth who have found places in the varied employment offered by the film industry, has been under investigation by a special squad of government officers for the past several weeks, it was reported at the Federal Building here today.

The information obtained by the investigators will be placed before Murray W. Garsson, special Assistant Secretary of Labor, leaving Washington today, when he arrives on the coast.

Although major studios said they were confident none of the leading players or directors were included in the government investigation, there are upwards of 500 persons of foreign birth who may become subject to the inquiry.

Preliminary reports of the squad of investigators were reported here to have shown sufficient facts to warrant a wholesale investigation of the film colony's foreign residents, many of whom, it was said, are living here on falsified passports and permits.

U. S. ATTORNEY ROBBED IN HOME

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A possibility gangland has started a concerted plan to intimidate law enforcing agencies in Los Angeles was investigated today following the holdup of Gwynn Redwine, Assistant United States District Attorney, and a party of friends in his home last night.

In another recent and markedly similar robbery the home of District Attorney Buron Fitts, of Los Angeles County, was invaded while he was entertaining guests. Police expressed the opinion there might be some connection between the two holdups.

Redwine was dining with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Redwine, and five others, when two men entered through the kitchen. Brandishing pistols, they made the diners place their hands on the table while they took $600 in jewelry and $34 in cash.

While members of the party were searched for valuables, the robbers overlooked $150 by failing to take the suggestion of the elder Redwine that they look in his hip pocket. Both escaped.

Both Fitts and Redwine have been active in the prosecution of criminal cases. Fitts employs a bodyguard.

PLAN TO STOP DOUBLE TAX

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Having definitely discarded plans for new taxation legislation this session, Democratic House leaders today began considering plans to eliminate double taxation during a special assembly of the new Congress in April.

By unifying taxes to permit the states to participate in revenue collected by the federal government, thereby eliminating various levies on the same products, the Democrats hope to raise additional revenue on the basis of increased consumption of tobacco, gasoline and other products.

Representatives of tobacco and gasoline interests already have proposed to Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee that before additional tax legislation is undertaken these proposals be given consideration.

BIRTH CONTROL LEAGUE URGES MORE BABIES

Students Stress Need Of Larger Healthy, 'Well-Off' Families

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—More babies among people who are fit for parenthood—that was the idea emphasized today as the American Birth Control League opened its annual convention.

Students of the spread of population had told league leaders that the American population is now limiting itself so that the stress should be changed from "birth restriction" to "birth selection." Mrs. F. Robertson Jones, president of the league, said:

"The league doesn't want to spread the impression that its whole policy is in favor of limiting the population. We want families that should have children to have them, but to make sure they are in a position to bring healthy children into the world.

"We shall carry on our birth control clinics as before, but we are just as much interested in helping the right sort of persons to have more children when they want them as in helping others to have fewer. We want to correct any impression on the part of the public that we are against having healthy children."

The "birth selection" view was set forth by Dr. Henry Pratt Fairchild, president of the Population Association of America, in the current "Birth Control Review." Louis I. Dublin, third vice president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, said the birth rate of the United States is falling so rapidly as to "virtually imperil the continued existence of the country." He said that in a few decades the population will be stationary, after which, at the present rate, it will decline.

Among the foreign guests invited to the convention was Baroness Keichi Ishimoto, Japanese birth control leader, who has been called "the Margaret Sanger of Japan."

$50,000 Balm Suit From Film Actor

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A $50,000 breach of promise suit, was on file here today by Katherine Allen against Monroe Owsley, motion picture actor. The complaint said Owsley proposed marriage last October 16 and was accepted, but that she learned later the proposal was not sincere.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 19.—Lew Ayres and his pretty blonde wife, Lola Lane, will ask for their freedoom in the divorce courts. Milton Cohen, famous divorce lawyer representing Miss Lane, or shall we say Mrs. Ayres, was to file suit today charging clash of temperaments and failure to make a go of their marriage. Martin Gang is representing youn Ayres and a property settlement has already been arranged.

Are you surprised? No more than I am!

A year and four months ago Lew and Lola eloped and were married. Then came talk that they were blessed-eventing. Then came denials. Then came talk of battles in the Ayres menage and then more denials.

Miss Lane, at the time of her marriage to the handsome juvenile, was doing pretty well on her own. She has more or less rettired from the screen since her marriage, but now she hopes to go back.

LION HUNTERS WAIT SUNSHINE ON 'VELDT'

'Bring 'Em Back Dead' Won't Start With Icicles on Chin

By JIMMIE (TARZAN) CORCORAN,

Retired Lion Tamer, International News Service.

WOLF ISLAND, Mo., Jan. 19.—Our two pals of the jungle, Pat and Jake, pinched themselves this morning after a wild night on the island and no doubt were surprised to find that they were still able to take nourishment instead of being a couple of corpus delecti.

In other words the lions are going about their chores within the boundary lines of their cages while the various huntsmen, including Denver (Bring 'Em Back Dead) Wright, bend to the business of knocking the icicles off their respective chins.

TAKING HIS TIME

There is no question but that Pat and Jake are "on the spot." But not until "Bring 'Em Back Dead" Wright gives the signal will the brutes be allowed to run for a few touchdowns through the wildwood, Jennie dear.

Huntsman Wright states that he is going to take his own sweet time about turning the lions loose. He declares that a one day lion hunt is hardly any lion hunt at all and furthermore, he told his wife he would not be home for a week.

The hunt may star tomorrow, or it may not get away until Washington's Birthday. But when Huntsman Wright gives the signal to the boys to shoulder the muskets the sun will be shining; that was what he said today, there must be sunshine.

PAT LETS OUT ROAR

A lot of jolly good fun was had on the island yesterday; all of us were armed with sticks and there was no end of comedy in prodding either Pat or Jake on the bugle to find out which one could growl the louder.

It rained for a stretch yesterday and you can well imagine my embarrassment when I found that I had neglected to bring along my umbrella. It strikes me that a hunter of my ilk is practically nude when he isn't armed with a bumbershoot. There is no question but that the implement would come in handy in case the lions took a running broad jump at you. I have a mental picture of myself standing there with either Pat or Jake impaled at the end of the rain stick. This, however, might make mine host, Huntsman Wright, mad.

KILLS GIRL OVER SUITOR HERE

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Charles Sciolino, 28, of Pittsburgh, fiance of Miss Sarah M. Sapienza, killed here yesterday by a jealous suitor, arrived in Buffalo today.

Sciolino said he had been engaged to the girl only six weeks. A letter left by Jasper P. Orlando, Buffalo tailor, who shot Miss Sapienza and then fatally wounded himself, indicated he was jealous.

Sciolino said Miss Sapienza and he had planned to be married this summer.

Orlando took the girl for a drive yesterday afternoon, shot her and then fired a bullet into his own head. A letter he left for the girl's brother said he could not live without her and asked that he be buried beside her. Orlando was a widower.

BUY TO SUPPORT U. S. INDUSTRY, MUNN URGES

Ralph Munn, director of Carnegie Libraries, today added his indorsement to the "Buy American" campaign sponsored by the Hearst newspapers.

The South Hills Kiwanis Club, at a meeting in the Mt. Lebanon United Lutheran Church, likewise passed a resolution unanimously urging everyone to "Buy American."

Louis A. Johnson, national commander of the American Legion, issued a statement in Clarksburg, W. Va., expressing his views.

LIBRARY CHIEF'S VIEW

Mr. Munn said:

"Ideas in books are universal, and cannot be limited on the whole to one people, but manufactured goods and unemployment have a definite relationship, and if buying American-made goods will help American workingmen get jobs, I believe it should be done."

With President W. C. Mosier presiding, the resolution submitted by G. H. Dunn, of the South Hills Kiwanis, was passed without dissent. It follows:

"Whereas, our country for the past three years has been going through a readjustment period far more drastic than any in its history.

"Whereas, fortunes have been wiped out, incomes drastically diminished, unemployment increased to 10,000,000 and untold hardships endured.

"Whereas, our country is being flooded with foreign goods made in several instances in American-owned factories owned by seifish unpatriotic Americans.

"Whereas, thousands of factories and mines, millions of men and billions of dollars are idle in this country.

"Resolved, South Hills Kiwanis Club unanimously indorse the 'Buy American' campaign. We believe that if the 'Buy American' campaign is made national in its scope and practiced by each citizen, especially in the border and coastal states, it will be a deciding factor in alleviating our present economic ills."

Commander Johnson said:

"The Buy American movement has a peculiar appeal to American Legion posts who are advancing it in many states.

"Legion leaders who are promoting the idea believe it is generous to American industry and labor. It is my personal opinion that too many of our manufacturers, merchants and individuals who decry unemployment and hard times either thoughtlessly or selfishly spend their money on imported foreign goods. America in times of depression should protect her own payrolls by consuming American goods that require American labor."

Co-ordinated Action By Manufacturers Sought

Co-ordination of all manufacturers' groups in the ceramic industry toward forwarding a Buy American program was assured with appointment of a special committee by the Associated Glass and Pottery Manufacturers, which today was closing its annual buyers' show at the Fort Pitt Hotel.

With buyers from all parts of the country revealing more confidence for business this year, manufacturers expressed satisfaction with the orders placed during the past 10 days. "Buy American" was the show slogan.

Charles H. West, beginning his eleventh year as president of the association, named M. A. Smith, of Jeannette; M. W. Thompson, East Liverpool, and L. K. Friedman, Pittsburgh, to co-operate with the American Ceramic Society, which meets here next month, and other groups in seeking to arouse purchase of American-made products to increase employment.

Officers re-elected at the annual meeting included: Mr. Smith, vice president; George S. Brush, Zanesville, treasurer; C. L. Sebring, Sebring, O., secretary, and J. M. Hammer, Pittsburgh, executive secretary and show manager.

Offers His Teeth To Pay for Taxi Ride

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Flashing a dazzling smile—he had two gold teeth—Peter Hourhoulis hailed a taxicab, and went places to the clicking tune of $1.65.

When Jack Kastrow, the cab driver, demanded the fare, Peter didn't have it. He said, removing the two teeth:

"Here, take these for your pay. They're worth more than $1.65."

COOKING SCHOOL TEACHER WELL QUALIFIED

Mrs. Helen Watts Schreiber, home economist, lecturer and home-making expert, will conduct the Kroger Foundation Cooking School, in the Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial Hall, next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons.

Mrs. Schreiber lectures and demonstrates from the soundest of scientific information, and from the practical angle. She is mother of two sons, one 18 and the other 14.

With a wide experience as a home maker and a hostess, she knows first hand the problems met by the average woman in caring for her family and entertaining her friends.

Following her graduation from Iowa State College, Mrs. Schreiber was a member of the Iowa State extension staff for some time. Later she was a lecturer and demonstrator for the home economics department of the Los Angeles Express, and following that, conducted newspaper cooking schools throughout the West and Middle West. She was chosen for her post with the Kroger Food Foundation after consideration of leading lecturers in her field.

GRID BROADCAST DISPUTE HEARD

Executives of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania testifying before a Public Service Commission hearing on complaints of discriminatory radio rates and disconnecting of a broadcast filed by Station WNBO, Washington, Pa., contradicted the utility concern's prepared answer filed at Harrisburg.

The hearing, which opened here yesterday, was continued until a future date, with presentation of WNBO evidence incomplete.

The Bell company's reply that cutting of a line on the station's circuit during the broadcast of a football game from Uniontown November 19 was accidental was contradicted by O. Clyde Steel, Bell manager at Washington, and E. F. Patterson, acting district manager, McKeesport district.

Patterson testified the disconnection was made upon his orders. The witness alleged unauthorized connections were made by the broadcast station. He said John B. Spriggs, head of the station, had been warned the broadcast would be stopped if the practice was continued.

HUSBANDS SEEK MISSING WIVES

When Howard Lawhead and Richard Cappel returned from work to their home at 2844 East street, they found their wives and children missing, they reported to the Bureau of Missing Persons today.

But present was a note from Lawhead's wife, Eva, 25, which seemed to explain:

"You'll be sorry. You don't love me any more. Now that I am gone, you will have plenty of time to think."

The two Cappel children, one aged 11 months, and the two Lawhead children, were found later at a neighbor's, where they had been left by the mothers, who told the neighbor they were going to a movie, the report stated.

The two wives were good friends the husbands reported.

FRENCH PLANES HUNT FLIERS

PARIS, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—More than a dozen French airplanes were enlisted today in searches over French territory in Africa and the Alps region for Lady Mary Bailey and Bert Hinkler, two of the British Empire's foremost fliers.

Planes were starting from various points in Algeria and Morocco to search for Lady Bailey, wife of a South African millionaire and mother of five children, who has been missing four days on an England-South Africa speed flight. At least a dozen planes, mostly military, were engaged.

French authorities said other planes would explore forest regions in the vicinity of Dijon and the French Alps for Bert Hinkler, missing 12 days since he began an attempt to recapture the England-Australia speed record.

EASTON, Pa., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Seven persons were hurt, one seriously, last night as, with more than a score of others, they rushed to escape through windows of a street car which caught fire.

Jailed for Hunting Clean Shirt in Laundry Truck

Looking for a clean shirt, Andrew Slamenda, 44, no home, climbed into the laundry truck of Walter F. Fuchs, he setified in Central Police Court this morning. ## Two Doomed to Die Win 10-Day Stay

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Two men, condemned to be hanged tomorrow morning for murders, were granted reprieves yesterday by Gov. Guy B. Park until February 10, to allow him time to investigate their cases.

Harry Worden, under death sentence for attacking a 16-year-old Carthage, Mo., schoolgirl during a highway robbery, and David A. Miller, sentenced to be hanged for slaying a spinster he believed had $85,000 hidden in her St. Charles County home, were the two men who won reprieves.

Sleeping Mother Shot by Child

PITTSTON, Pa., Jan. 19.—(INS.)—Shot with a rifle by her 8-year-old son as she slept, Mrs. Minnie Maritz, of Inkerman, was a patient at Pittston Hospital today. She was expected to recover.

The boy, Adam Maritz, was playing with the gun at the time and police were satisfied the shooting was accidental.

PAIN DEADENED CHEST COLDS LOOSENED WITHOUT DRUGS

Get quick relief from neuralgia pain, sciatica pain, neuritis pain, rheumatic pain, lame back, stiff neck, headache, strains and chest colds by rubbing plenty of Baume Bengue (pronounced Ben-Gay) on the spot. It doesn't blister or stain. Rub it in till it sinks down and soothes the pain or breaks up the chest cold. Take no drugs, for any drug that is powerful enough to "deaden" pain or loosen a chest cold may not be good for you.

But beware of imitations. Ask your druggist for Baume Bengué by name (called "Ben-Gay" in English). There are many analgesic baumes, mostly cheap imitations of Ben-Gay made out of synthetic drugs. That is why they are cheap. That is also why they are ineffective. Insist on Ben-Gay and you will get real results.

Hungary Proposes To Ban Bridge For Women

BUDAPEST, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—On the grounds that the fascination of small and grand slams, strips, squeezes and end plays was breaking up many a happy Hungarian home, the government today had prepared a bill prohibiting women from playing bridge in restaurants and coffee houses.

The action was taken, a government spokesman explained, because the present craze for bridge in this country is keeping women in restaurants all night long.

The bill would provide imprisonment for violation of the law.

SUNDAY BENEFIT FOR FATHER COX

Harry Kalmine, regional director of the Warner Theaters, read in the Sun-Telegraph yesterday that Father Cox is in the hospital Mr. Kalmine immediately called the Sun-Telegraph and said:

"Now is the time to get our shoulder to the wheel for Father Cox. They've got him where he needs assistance more than ever. Let's give him another of those big food shows so that he won't have to worry for a week or two about where the food is to come from to feed the hundreds of needy families and the long bread line that comes to him every day for assistance."

Mr. Kalmine announced another benefit show for Father Cox will be given next Sunday. This time it will be at the de luxe Enright Theater. Mr. Kalmine will arrange the best show that has yet been presented for one of these Sunday benefits and, matching his liberality, he expects those who attend to be equally liberal with their donations. No money will be accepted. Donations of food will be the only tickets required. Standard canned goods and standard package groceries are preferred—tea, coffee, sugar, flour, rice, cereals—in fact, anything in the way of wholesome food that will help a starving family.

Manager Frank E. Roberts, of the Enright, announces that all of his employes will gladly donate their services, including the motion picture operators and the stage hands. He says the show will be a "wow."

FAVORS COUNTY JOBS' MERGER

Speaking at a meeting of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, T. Ralph Barr, member of the Allegheny County Board for Assessment and Revision of Taxes, said all county elective offices should be consolidated for efficiency and economy. The combined offices, he declared, should be under the supervision of the County Commissioners.

Barr criticized the present system under which, he said, the County Commissioners set the tax rate, but have direct control of only approximately 20 per cent of county funds. He urged realtors to take an active interest in government affairs to seek relief from the heavy tax burden on real estate.

Butter Award Won By Company Here

Pittsburgh district milk producers share in the honor of bringing the first prize for creamery butter to this city at the Pennsylvania Farm Products Show being held this week in Harrisburg under auspices of State College. The state honor was won by the Fairmont Creamery Company of Pittsburgh, which obtains cream from producers throughout Allegheny County.

SCRIP SUCCESS AT COXTOWN

While a nation-wide movement seems to be getting under way for the employment of "barter" money, the idea, in a small way, has been launched in Pittsburgh with no little success.

Father Cox introduced "Coxtown currency" to his Coxtown community something over a month ago, and he finds that it is a practicable idea. For everything that the Coxtown residents do in the way of labor and production, they are compensated with special "barter" money in denominations of 25, 50 and 75 cents and $1. This scrip is redeemable at the Old St. Patrick's commissary for food and clothing, and much of it already has been "cashed in." The Coxtownites like the idea of being paid for what they are doing—even though it is in "barter" money.

In the meantime, Father Cox is still in Mercy Hospital and expects to remain there for two or three weeks. He will keep in touch with his welfare activities as much as his doctors will permit, but insists, above all things, that the daily bread line at Old St. Patrick's must be provided with food and coffee every day. There were approximately 2,500 men and boys in this bread line yesterday.

The Sun-Telegraph is helping to do the things that Father Cox wants to do through a special subscription drive. For every order that comes in on the blank on this page, the Father Cox Unemployment Fund gets a liberal cash commission.

Death of Man Hit By Auto Probed

The death of Robert McKinley, 68, of 213 North Mathilda street, who died today in the Pittsburgh Hospital from injuries suffered in an automobile accident on November 24 at Tokio and Bennett streets, is being investigated by the Coroner. Ernest Schuster, of 621 Pennsylvania avenue, Dormont, the driver of the car, is under $1,000 bail pending inquest.

Aimee to Appear In Religious Film

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, evangelist, due to start a proposed world tour of her missions today, said she would appear in a religious motion picture to be produced by a major studio in Hollywood on her return from the trip.

NEW FASHIONS DISPLAYED IN STORE HERE

Dame Fashion, in a mid-season effort to brighten drab winter wardrobes with economical hints of coming spring, parades before hundreds of Pittsburgh women thrice daily, today and tomorrow, at Gimbels.

The themes of her mid-season frocks are thrift, utility and beauty. At 12:15, 2:30 and 8:30 p. m. today and tomorrow, bright new models of town, cruise and beach wear are being shown. Coat trends for spring are predicted in tweed, camel's hair and rabbit's angora. The recent militaristic, bi-centennial influence on shoulders has developed into a swagger cape coat fad, which promises to be popular.

Summer will be a time of gay prints, silk crepe, with taffeta and organdy trimmings. Suits lean toward flannel and wool. Bridge and luncheon frocks are of rough crepe, heavy sheer crepe and silk crepe, with taffeta and lace sleeves and accents. Good old black and white combinations, with new hook-ups of materials, make ideal mid-season frocks for street, home and business.

Wool jersey beach suits, checked silk jersey sports frocks, flannel jackets, wool skirts and sweaters, striped pique beach dresses, cotton beach costumes, jersey beach pajamas and rabbit's hair angora skirts with suede cloth jackets, depict cruise and southern resort fashions.

The two-time frocks are Dame Fashion's mid-season contribution to budget-conscious women who like to reconcile smartness with versatile utility. In chiffon, moire, shirred chiffon, silk crepe and prints, these frocks do double and triple duty. Most of them have jackets which permit their correct wear in the afternoon, at dinner, at the theater and, jacketless, at formal affairs.

PROTEST RALLY SET TUESDAY

A permit to hold a demonstration against the alleged brutal treatment of Jews in Poland was to be granted today to the newly-formed United Workers' and Students' League.

The demonstration, scheduled for Tuesday, will be held at the entrance to Schenley Park. Representatives of the league yesterday told City Council the police department had "curtly refused" the permit, giving no reason.

A speaker for the league asked the right to stage the demonstration at Craig street and Center avenue, near the residence of the Polish consul. Council consented to help the league obtain the permit after the members agreed to hold the meeting at the park entrance.

BANKER TRIAL CALLS BROKERS

Stock transactions of Ansley D. Smith, former cashier of the closed Citizens Trust Company of Bellevue, today were brought into the embezzlement charges, on which Smith is on trial before Judge A. B. Reid.

When H. K. Witzel, bookkeeper for Masten & Co., brokers, was called to testify to Smith's personal stock transactions, the defense objected unless Witzel produced records and court ordered an adjournment until Witzel and other brokers' representatives returned to court with their books.

Chester Wilt testified late yesterday that he sold $589 building and loan stock to Smith and received a cashier's check, and Robert Hill told of selling $2,000 of bank stock to Smith. They were followed on the stand by Mrs. Florence Gilliland, teller in the bank, who was asked whether Smith had these amounts in his own account when he gave the checks.

Special Deputy Attorney General David Glick is assisting Assistant District Attorneys H. R. Phillips and Earl R. Adair in the prosecution of the case.

Chauffeur Confesses To Women's Murder

Tomorrow afternoon there's to be many a reunion within a reunion. The event for all these reunions in Pittsburgh is the annual luncheon of the Federation of Girls' School Societies in the Twentieth Century Club.

The alumnae of all the many, many schools making up the federation, from Miss Mason's to Farmington, Dobbs Ferry, and the other schools attracting the sub-debs today, will be there.

And each school has its own table at the luncheon. After the luncheon officers will be elected.

Gracious Mrs. George Singer Ebbert has been the capable—and popular—leader of the Federation for several years.

The John M. Wilsons are enjoying sunny California weather. They have been at the Hotel Vista del Arroyo in Pasadena.

Visiting In West

Taking a January holiday in Atlantic City is Mrs. Thomas K. Cree, who is stopping at the Chalfonte-Haddon Hall.

The alumnae of Miss Mason's School, and there are many in Pittsburgh, elected officers at a meeting Tuesday in the popular Twentieth Century Club.

Alumnae Elects

Mrs. Grant Wainwright is the president; Mrs. Clarence B. Steffey, vice president; Mrs. W. C. Reitz II, secretary; Mrs. Percy C. Sieverd, treasurer; Mrs. J. George Kahl, chairman of occupational therapy, and Mrs. Dirce Ann McClung, publicity.

The popular T. M. Joneses III have a new son—Morton McMichael Jones. He arrived at the Magee Hospital January 12.

New Son, Daughter

And the Arthur Murtland Scullys have a little daughter, Marion Crocker Scully, born on January 12, too, but at St. Margaret's Hospital.

Have you heard that Matthew Taylor and his daughter, Margaret, will leave the first of next month for a brief tour of Europe? And that Marjorie Hillman will go with them?

* * *

The Frank G. Darlingtons will entertain Sunday night in their home at one of those small, intimate entertainments so popular now that the season of large parties is over. They will give a dinner for Mrs. Joseph Matthews, of Albany, Tex., house guest of Mrs. James W. Arrott III, of Sewickley.

To Give Dinner

Editor to Speak At Alliance Meeting

The Pittsburgh Alliance of Delta Delta Delta will have as its guest and speaker Victor L. Alski at the regular monthly meeting which will be held on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 at the Chapter House on Bigelow boulevard. Mr. Alski, editor and publisher of the Pittsburgh Polish daily newspaper Pittsburczanin, has chosen for his subject "The American Student in the European College."

Miss Margaret Sander, of the class of 1925 at the University of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Malcolm Zander, of the class of 1927, are joint chairmen of the hostess committee.

'Most Popular' Debutante Leads Capital Cotillion

WASHINGTON.—Miss Alexander Bacon, the debutante picked in New York as "getting the biggest whirl with the stag lines," continued her whirling career in Washington last Monday night when she led the figures of the second Bachelor Cotillion with Brig. Gen. William E. Horton.

She's the daughter of Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, of New York. Her mother was one of the matrons receiving the 300 cotillion guests.

Another deb who found some fame last week was titian-haired Miss Ann Daingerfield, whose portrait titled "Cameo" won a $200 popular prize by vote of the visitors at the exhibit of contemporary oil paintings at the Corcoran Gallery.

Its painter, Bjorn Egeli, was less beset than Ann, who pronounced herself "tired of hearing about it at this point."

Arnold School Dance To Be Held Tomorrow

Inaugurating an interesting program of mid-winter social events in Arnold School gymnasium, a formal dance will be given tomorrow evening by the "A" Club of which George Watt is president; Benjamin Day, secretary, and Edmund Dandridge, treasurer. Balloons in clusters about the lights are planned as the principal decorations.

Clarence W. Head Named Akron Club President

Clarence W. Head was elected president of the Pittsburgh Club of Akron University at a reunion dinner held in the College Club last night. T. F. Rockwell is the new vice president and Miss Irene Wilson was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Dr. J. H. James, and other members of the club, spoke briefly and in reminiscent mood.

Gossipy Chat

By NANCY JANE

Mrs. James Stephen Martin is enjoying I-told-you-so thoughts.

Just before her Madrigal Singers put on a program over a radio network Christmas, the studio folks were in an agony of nervousness for fear Mrs. Martin, in spite of her assurances, wouldn't see that her artists were through in time.

They finished one-quarter of a minute too soon—and the announcer took care of that, and the studio has an increased respect for the Madrigal's popular director.

Most of us are thrilled to have our homes adorned with one needlepoint cushion or chair, but the Stirling Murray Rusts have their dining room chairs—early American maple—all upholstered in needlepoint with bright, light blue as the predominating color.

If one imported some palm trees—and a lot of sunshine—one might think on Wednesday afternoons that the indoor tennis courts of the Pittsburgh Golf Club were in Palm Beach or in Pittsburgh in the good old summer time.

The players all wear bright sweaters and skirts.

Recently Louise Reed and her sister-in-law, Mrs. W. McCook Reed, were playing, and nearby was some knitting—a gay blue sweater in the making. Which one it belonged to, I don't know. But I do know that everyone's knitting something nowadays.

Good-looking, brunette Mrs. John H. Ricketson III, wears tortoise-shell rimmed spectacles when she's playing tennis.

BLACK CHIFFON IS REVIVED FOR NEW EVENING POPULARITY

BLACK CHIFFON, an old favorite evening fashion of the well-dressed, is being revived. Many smart women, tired of bright red creped and black satins, are taking up a fashion that has always had big seasons of success, and are adapting it to 1933 silhouettes. Many of the newest evening dresses appearing at fashionable theater openings are either entirely of black chiffon or are of chiffon combined with lace or with satin.

THE SHOULDER straps are both braided—one of strips of the chiffon, and the other of rolls of cire satin in orange and yellow.

TAILORED, ALSO, in effect, is the sleeveless blouse worn with a separate skirt, as a new version of the fancy for waist-and-skirt fashions for dinner and evening. Originally done in vari-colored leather, to wear with beach pajamas, this little blouse now appears in fabric, for town wear. It was designed by Classen-Smith.

Four Speakers Entertain At Quarterly Meeting Of Club Congress

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Talks by a quartet of especially interesting speakers, together with exceptional music, comprised the program for the quarterly meeting of the Congress of Clubs yesterday. Reports of department heads and committee chairmen added interest to the day's proceedings.

George H. Dennison, special investigator for the Better Business Bureau, described the work of his corporation, which is operated on a non-profit basis and financed by legitimate business. Mr. Dennison went on to tell of "The Racket's Toll on Your Budgett," enumerating several rackets to which the housewife is exposed—the door-to-door charity sales person, the cash bonus solicitor, peddlers, beggars, especially children with hard luck tales, and he urged the women to "investigate before you invest."

Judge Sara Soffel talked on Juvenile Court work, answering the criticisms which have recently been brought against the court, by quoting from her own experiences and the auditor's report. Statistics show that crime begins in youth, is developed in adolescence and reaches its apex in early maturity, she said, in stressing the need of preventive work among juveniles.

In the afternoon Attorney William H. McNair, of the Henry George Foundation, spoke concerning single tax, "economic rent," as he calls it, as a means of "Doing Away With Slums."

The last of the four speakers was John George Bucher, of Allentown, former newspaper correspondent and former service man, who spent some time in Central Europe doing famine relief work. With "Germany Today" as his subject, he said Hitlerism is an economic protest against current conditions. He asked for an understanding of Germany, saying that, although the outlook for Germany is optimistic, there are days ahead which will require all the ability and wisdom of the country's leaders. Modernism is the keynote of Germany, but the beautiful things of the past have been preserved, he said.

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Saves $2. No Cooking! So Easy!

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs very little, but it positively has no equal for quick, lasting relief.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with granulated sugar syrup, made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's so easy! Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and children love its taste.

This simple mixture soothes and heals the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Comedy and drama from Broadway and music and chatter from Hollywood mark two NBC network offerings, heard locally through WCAE, tonight.

Other guests are Lois Bennett, leading soprano of Winthrop Ames' Gilbert and Sullivan Company, Milton Berle, comedian from Earl Carroll's recent "Vanities," and Oliver Wakefield, recently-arrived English funster.

At 12:30 a. m. the same facilities carry a special program presented from Hollywood by a group of cowboy actors headed by Tom Keene, new Western star. The program typifies the wild west of the screen, with cowboy songs, chatter and music.

'Old Man River' Wins Song Contest

Jerome Kern's "Old Man River," written for Florenz Ziegfeld's "Showboat," is the best popular song written during the last 10 years—according to no less than 327 radio artists, musicians and composers representing all of the key cities of broadcasting. The selection was given a big lead over all others during a poll recently conducted by Aircaster radio columnist of the New York Evening Journal. The 10 choices, to be played by Guy Lombardo and his orchestra over a coast-to-coast CBS network Saturday night, are:

"Old Man River."
"The Man I Love."
"My Blue Heaven."
"Goodnight Sweetheart."
"When Day Is Done."
"Stardust."
"I'll See You in My Dreams."
"Tea For Two."
"Lover Come Back to Me."
"Russian Lullaby."

An average of 16 song hits a year—160 songs—were listed in the voting with "What is This Thing Called Love?", "Ramona," "Without a Song," and "Chloe" as close runners-up.

It's reported that South Side listeners are getting up a petition for the return of Roslyn Silber and Alfred Corn to the "Goldbergs" cast. They originally played the juvenile roles of "Rosie" and "Sammy."

* * *

Emery Deutsch, encouraged by the success of his first popular composition, "Play, Fiddle, Play," is working now on two new dance tunes . . . Singin' Sam, who just sold a new song a few days ago, has completed another, co-operating with Emil Seidel, his pianist. It's called "Moonlight on the Swanee" . . . and Nat Shilkret is hard at work on an opera . . .

Ralph Kirbery says he thinks he's earned a new air contract—because he had such a lot of trouble getting to the NBC studios for a commercial audition. Kirbery, who lives in Paterson, N. J., received a hurry call to go to New York and had driven about two miles when water in the gas halted everything . . . so he called a friend and continued the trip . . . but just as they reached New York a tire went flat, so Kirbery hailed a taxi—which ran out of gas after a few blocks. A second taxi finally got him to his destination.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Today's mail brings the following questions, which we hasten to answer:

W. J. Kirsch—The Stephen Collins Foster Home on Penn avenue is open to the public every day from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. Ask to see Mrs. Alexander Rose . . . Once you have passed the driver's test, you may let it lapse for two years before it becomes necessary to be re-examined . . . There is no examining radio officer in Pittsburgh. Mr. Lutton. By the new allocation, the nearest one is in Buffalo.

A feathered interpretation of "Romeo and Juliet." Mrs. C. A. Olson's platinum blonde canary bursts into operatic cadenzas every time a certain Mr. Redbreast struts on the back fence.

Friend James Tullius, of Clairton, is righteously indignant. Says someone is spoiling radio reception by operating an amateur station. Clairton residents should write to Federal Radio Commission, concisely stating the facts. You'll get action.

West End residents today are congratulating the Rev. John C. Angel. He celebrates his silver jubilee as a priest, his birthday and the fifth anniversary as pastor of St. Martin's Church.

* * *

Button up that overcoat. A cold blast from Connellsville. Charles Williams is still playing the coast football game and he's not overloaded with compliments for the home team. Charley, let's forget the whole matter.

Now $1 equals $3 in buying protection against colds

PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC is 3 times as powerful as other leading mouth antiseptics. Hence it goes 3 times as far. And whether you buy the 25c, 50c, or $1 size, you still get 3 times as much for your money.

YOU may be trying to save money. But instead of saving it, you're losing it if you don't know the difference between the two kinds of mouth antiseptics on the market. One kind must be used full strength to be effective—if you add water, it won't kill germs.

Pepsodent CAN be diluted

But the other kind—Pepsodent Antiseptic—is powerful enough to be diluted with 2 parts of water and still kill germs in less than 10 seconds—yet Pepsodent is absolutely safe when used full strength. Pepsodent Antiseptic is at least three times as powerful as other leading mouth antiseptics. Hence it goes three times as far—gives you three times as much for your money—and gives you extra protection against stubborn sore throat colds, unpleasant breath, and germ infections.

Be safe—and save money!

When choosing your mouth antiseptic, be sure you choose the one that, even when it is diluted with water, still kills germs! The other kind costs more . . . either in money or in health. Insist on Pepsodent Antiseptic—and be safe!

IMPURE BREATH (Halitosis)

The amazing results of Pepsodent Antiseptic in fighting sore throat colds prove its effectiveness in checking Bad Breath (Halitosis). Remember, Pepsodent is 3 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics. Remember, even when diluted with water it still kills germs.

KOPPERS AIDE AIRS STOCK DEALS

International News Service.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 19.—"It reached a stage where it would not have been safe even to have mentioned the subject. There would have been an eruption."

Such was the description of the seriousness of the conflict between the Mellon-controlled Koppers group and the Eaton-controlled United Light and Power interests in 1928, given by John S. Brookes, Jr., of Pittsburgh, in Chancery Court today.

CALLED TO TESTIFY

Brookes had been called to testify as to a series of stock transactions in which the American Light and Traction Company is alleged to have lost over $25,000,000. The charges have been made by Harry Helfman, a Detroit lawyer and stockholder in the traction company, who is demanding restitution from 30 public utility companies alleged to have profited by the deals.

The subject mentioned by Brookes as carrying so much dynamite at that time had grown out of a proposed contract between the Koppers Company and the Brooklyn Union Gas Company, whereby the Koppers Company was to purchase a coke plant it was building for the gas company and sell the gas to the Brooklyn utility.

CONFLICTING VIEWS

This, Brookes declared, was in opposition to the views of R. B. Brown, president of the traction company which held a large block of stock in the Brooklyn company, Brown's view also being held by other officials who were also connected with the United Light and Power Company.

United and Koppers were the majority stockholders in the traction company at the time.

Brookes said that Brown attempted to intervene, laying his protest before officials of the Brooklyn company.

Koppers was "very much incensed" by such a protest, and from that point on, according to Brookes, the breach rapidly widened, until the two factions reached the point where the mere mention of the subject would have caused an "eruption."

This situation finally led to the purchase of the Koppers holdings in American, by United, and it was the transactions involved in this dissolution of their joint holdings that are cited by Helfman as the reasons for American's alleged losses.

Don't get stumped on this one. It's easy. Answer tomorrow.

By KENNETH A. NAGEL
Cipher Editor

Cipher No. 44 was submitted by Robert B. Smeltz, Jr., of Allison Park. It's an easy one. Not so easy that it won't cause you trouble, however, unless you "catch on quick."

"Bogie" on this is only half an hour. Let's see if you can do that well. One hint—it's connected with Gene Tunney's story, appearing in the Sun-Telegraph every day.

Did you complete Cipher No. 43? It was rather hard, wasn't it? Today's table or chart should be enough of an explanation for you cipher fans.

The first group of vowels is "EO." To decipher it, run your finger down the left-hand column of the table until you come to the "E" line—the second. Then follow the line horizontally to the "O" column—the fourth. Where the "E" line crosses the "O" column you will find the letter represented by the combination "EO"—or "I." Decipher in this manner and—presto—you have it.

More original ciphers for you fans come from J. Fred Inon, of Leetsdale, Pa.; James E. McCalmont, of Burgettstown, Pa., and William Duly, of McKees Rocks. Duly writes:

"This cipher should keep your fans guessing for some time. As it deals with algebra it is entirely different from the ones you have already used. Let's hope you will use it soon."

It should be easy with this key. How long did it take you? The answer was:

POLITICS
Senators Cling to Scholarships
By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Jan. 19.—Pennsylvania Senators intend to hold on to their scholarship patronage despite the suggestion of Senator Richard Williamson, of Huntingdon, chairman of the Committee on Education, that the system be abandoned.

Mr. Shields

At a gathering of committee members this week, Williamson urged that "because of the trouble" the system caused Senators, the wounded feelings of those who did not receive scholarships, that it might be advantageous to abandon the whole plan. But he didn't get far.

Unanimously the other members of the committee asserted they would take a chance on the trouble in return for being able to name sons of friends or political helpers for admission to the University of Pittsburgh, the University of Pennsylvania, Penn State and Temple.

Practice Originated Several Years Ago

The practice was originated several years ago. The universities must endure it because they receive appropriations from the state, and the Senators are presumed to be in a more generous mood because of the courtesy accorded them.

Scholarships became live news last fall when it was alleged that as Senators traded them sectionally they fell into the hands of political workers who conducted a brokerage business in the free tuition. The story broke over a swap between Senators William D. Mansfield, of McKeesport, and Max Aron, of Philadelphia. Mansfield traded a University of Pennsylvania scholarship to Aron for one in the University of Pittsburgh, a common practice, and an advantageous one so long as the scholarship system exists.

It would not help an Eastern Senator to give a Pitt scholarship to one of his constituents, forcing him to live so far from home. And the thing works with reverse, of course.

Leaders Permitted To Designate Appointees

The scholarship Mansfield had traded Aron through some circumstance fell into the hands of a "broker." This is possible, because in some districts, particularly where the Republican organization rules with a strong hand, and needs all available patronage to perpetuate its hold, there is a practice of permitting political leaders rather than senators to designate the appointees.

Despite these chances for mix-ups, the senators are not going to surrender their patronage.

A few senators remove the plan as far as possible from politics by making their awards through the competitive examination method. Even this is not certain to carry out the spirit behind the patronage—or which should be behind it—of assisting through college young men and women who without the scholarships would be unable to get higher education.

More for Governor Plan Frowned Upon

From time to time the suggestion has been made that the senatorial scholarships be abolished, and that a larger number than he now has be placed in the hands of the Governor, to be distributed through competitive examinations. This, however, has been frowned upon by the majority of senators who refuse to relinquish their privileges.

One of the high spots in the whole scholarship issue occurred a few legislative sessions ago, when the House, jealous that the senators alone should share these plums, though the House is equally authoritative in making appropriations, prepared a resolution as a rider on the appropriations bills declaring House members in on the cut.

University Heads Throw Up Hands

At that the university heads threw up their hands. With mathematical pencils they figured out for the information of any who would read that the total costs of the free tuition would be far greater than the state appropriations and would compel each university to engage in expansive building programs to house the politically appointed students.

The ridiculousness of this proposal as a piece of economy—political or any other kind—laughed the resolution out of the legislative halls.

But it did not stop the senators from holding on to their advantage, and they have just decided to continue that grip.

Second Still Found In Raid on Home

Beneath a movable washroom in the rear of a house at 754 Reedsdale street, prohibition agents reported confiscating a 100-gallon still, 455 gallons of moonshine and destroying 1,515 gallons of mash yesterday. It was the second time within two years that a still was found in the place, agents said.

The raid followed the confiscation of five gallons of moonshine and an automobile nearby.

Homestead Mid-Year Graduation Tonight

The mid-year commencement of Homestead High School will be held tonight in the Homestead Carnegie Library. Prof. Robert T. Galbraith, president of Westminster College, will speak. Diplomas will be presented by Ella Coughlin, vice president of the Homestead School Board.

Stepmother Cheered Former President in His Rise to Success

CHAPTER V.

In March of my senior year my sister, Abbie, died. She was three years my junior, but so proficient in her studies that she was but two classes below me in school. She was ill scarcely a week. Several doctors were in attendance, but could not save her. Thirty years later one of them told me he was convinced she had appendicitis, which was a disease not well understood in 1890. I went home when her condition became critical and stayed beside her until she passed to join our mother. The memory of the charm of her presence and her dignified devotion to the right will always abide with me.

In the spring of 1890 came my graduation. The class had five boys and four girls. With so small a number it was possible for all of us to take part in the final exercises with orations and essays. The subject that I undertook to discuss was "Oratory in History," in which I dealt briefly with the effect of the spoken word in determining human action.

Heard President

It had been my thought, as I was but 17, to spend a year in some of the larger preparatory schools and then enter a university. But it was suddenly decided that a smaller college would be preferable, so I went to Amherst. On my way there I contracted a heavy cold, which grew worse, interfering with my examinations, and finally sent me home, where I was ill for a considerable time.

But by early winter I was recovered, so that I did a good deal of work helping repair and paint the inside of the store building which my father still owned and rented. There was time for much reading and I gave great attention to the poems of Sir Water Scott. After a few weeks in the late winter at my old school I went to St. Johnsbury Academy for the spring term. Its principal was Dr. Putney, who was a fine drill master, a very exact scholar, and an excellent disciplinarian. He readily gave me a certificate entitling me to enter Amherst without further examination, which he would never have done if he had not been convinced I was a proficient student. His indorsement of the work I had already done, after having me in his own classes for a term, showed that Black River Academy was not without some merit.

During the summer vacation my father and I went to the dedication of the Bennington Battle Monument. It was a most elaborate ceremony with much oratory followed by a dinner and more speaking, with many bands of music and a long military parade. The public officials of Vermont and many from New York were there. I heard President Harrison, who was the first President I had ever seen, make an address. As I looked on him and realized that he personally represented the glory and dignity of the United States I wondered how it felt to bear so much responsibility and little thought I should ever know.

Patience Rewarded

The fall of 1891 found me back at Amherst taking up my college course in earnest. Much of its social life centered around the fraternities, and although they did not leave me without an invitation to join them it was not until senior year that an opportunity came to belong to one that I wished to accept. It has been my observation in life that, if one will only exercise the patience to wait, his wants are likely to be filled.

My class was rather small, not numbering more than 85 in a student body of about 400. President Julius H. Seelye, who had led the college for about 20 years with great success as an educator and inspirer of young men, had just retired. He had been succeeded by President Merrill E. Gates, a man of brilliant intellect and fascinating personality though not the equal of his predecessor in directing college policy. But the faculty as a whole was excellent, having many strong men, and some who were pre-eminent in the educational field.

The college of that day had a very laudable desire to get students, and having admitted them, it was equally alert in striving to keep them and help them get an education, with the result that very few left of their own volition and almost none were dropped for failure in their work. There was no marked exodus at the first examination period, which was due not only to the attitude of the college but to the attitude of the students, who did not go there because they wished to experiment for a few months with college life and be able to say thereafter they had been in college, but went because they felt they had need of an education, and expected to work hard for that purpose until the course was finished. There were few triflers.

Father Remarried

A small number became what we called sports, but they were not looked on with favor, and they have not survived. While the class has lost many excellent men besides, yet it seems to be true that unless men live right they die. Things are so ordered in this world that those who violate its law cannot escape the penalty. Nature is inexorable. If men do not follow the truth they cannot live.

My absence from home during my freshman year was more easy for me to bear because I was no longer leaving my father alone. Just before the opening of college he had married Miss Carrie A. Brown, who was one of the finest women in our neighborhood. I had known her all my life. After being without a mother nearly seven years I was greatly pleased to find in her all the motherly devotion that she could have given me if I had been her own son. She was a graduate of Kimball Union Academy and had taught school for some years. Loving books and music she was not only a mother to me but a teacher. For thirty years she watched over me and loved me, welcoming me when I went home, writing me often when I was away, and encouraging me in all my efforts. When at last she sank to rest she had seen me made Governor of Massachusetts and knew I was being considered for the Presidency.

It seems as though good influences had always been coming into my life. Perhaps I have been more fortunate in that respect than others. But while I am not disposed to minimize the amount of evil in the world I am convinced that the good predominates and that it is constantly all about us, ready

Old Cribbing Methods Now Deemed 'Sordid'

Ingenious Methods For Classroom Cheating Told

The art of cribbing in examinations has developed a new technique in the classroom.

In the Pitt Panther, humorous publication of the University of Pittsburgh, an anonymous writer says the methods dad and mother used are now amateurish and that the new ones "bring a glow of pride to the cheater's breast."

Cribbers of old put their notes on cuffs or finger-nails, inside a hat on the lap, on the end of the necktie or in the coat lining. In these methods, the writer says, "there is more of the sordid than the artistic."

The writer suggests newer and more ingenious ways.

A girl can hide the crib under a sheer silk stocking and hold it in place with a garter or keep it in her vanity case. The writer says:

"Most professors are too modest about interrupting a young lady's toilette."

The male student, he points out, can paste the crib on his leg with adhesive tape or put it in his fountain pen cap.

The writer's favorite method is to copy his notes on sugar wafers, for if suspicions are aroused the evidence can quickly be eaten. To tap dancers who have trouble passing exams, he recommends that the crib be written on gummed paper and pasted on the shoe sole.

Many students, he says, have adopted the method which legend calls the Princeton scroll. This calls for placing notes on a narrow roll of paper held in the hand during the test.

The anonymous writer says there is this disadvantage in cribbing through an examination:

"The only trouble is that every time I prepare a crib, I spend so much time on it that I have it memorized by the time I've finished."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Jan. 19.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Everything is different nowadays, even the way a country gets its freedom. We give the Philippines 12 years. In two years they are to have a constitution, that is suitable to us. I hope they make it. Ours after 150 years is not suitable to us. They owe us some money, so we bet their freedom against ten years, that they cant pay us that. (We cant pay our national debt in 100 years.) So here is all they got to do to get their freedom: get a constitution that will suit Democrat and Republican, pay all their debts, and keep out of the clutches of Japan. That's what I call a sporting offer.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

English Find Many Names for Their Lawmakers

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

We're getting lots of wear and tear out of this short session of Congress.

It compares very well with Cromwell's rump parliament or one of those French cabinets which collapses in an argument over the weather.

The English have a loveable habit of memoralizing their legislative spasms with names you never find on loving cups.

There was the Mad Parliament of 1258, the Mongrel of 1681, the Parliament of Dunces and the Drunken Parliament.

So an Englishman never boasts of being elected to anything until he finds out how he is doing on the third of fourth bounce.

Different lands, different customs. Napoleon was losing a debate to a national convention when his brother Lucien got there with the army and his ma dashed in with a mop handle.

That Drunken Parliament must have been a lot of fun, eh what?

STORE SYSTEM HELD COSTLY BY BOARD

Terms Group Markets Only Way to Care For State Needy

HARRISBURG, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The State Emergency Relief Board today estimated Pennsylvania's 1933 jobless relief bill at more than $125,000,000 for 2,000,000 persons.

Of this amount "at least $100,000,000 will be needed before the year is out for food alone," the board said, and the remainder would be required for clothing, shoes, medicine and fuel.

For this reason the board said it has approved the community market system "solely as a measure made necessary by one of the greatest emergencies the commonwealth has ever had to face."

The board said:

"The fullest amount of money for which we can hope will be insufficient to meet the need. Under the present store order plan the money available to the board, or likely to be available, cannot possibly be stretched to cover the needs of our people.

"But with the community market system carefully administered, there will be something left for fuel, clothing, shoes and medicine."

Under the community market system ample, healthful and palatable food can be supplied for almost half the cost of the present system of food orders, the board said.

The new system provides for centralized and bulk purchasing at lower costs and provides each needy family with a balanced ration of food to meet each person's diet requirements according to age, weight and health, the board said.

BIGGER DEMANDS SEEN

With the unemployed estimated at 1,091,000, the number of families receiving relief is 400,000.

A further increase in families needing relief to 500,000 before the end of the year is expected by the board.

Of the estimated $125,000,000 needed for this year, the state and federal governments have appropriated almost $20,000,000.

SOCIETY WOMAN JAILS FLIER

Capt. Jack Morris, young flier, was in the county lockup today, jailed by a middle-aged society sportswoman who accused him of not coming home when she told him to.

The formal charge was larceny by bailee of a racing plane owned by Miss Katherine May Edwards, herself a flier, of 4801 Forbes street. But Miss Edwards explained today:

"I didn't have him arrested for stealing, understand. I had him arrested because he didn't come home when I told him to—absent without leave, or whatever you call it."

Morris, who taught Miss Edwards to fly, flew the Edwards ship in the recent Miami races and won one contest.

Miss Edwards said her contract with Morris expired a few days before the Miami races. Last year he flew Miss Edwards and Mrs. William Thaw to Mexico City.

Morris explained that his contract gave him the right to fly the Edwards monocoupe when and where he pleased. His wife today was arranging to post bail pending a hearing.

Schools Abandon Picture Purchases

Carl M. McKee, superintendent of supplies of the Board of Public Education, has announced that a request for bids for about $8,000 worth of pictures for new school buildings has been withdrawn. The decision not to buy the pictures was made by him after consideration of general economic conditions, McKee said. The board had not acted on the purchase.

'Shower Bath' Charged In Wife's Divorce Suit

Mrs. Burtt said her husband was insanely jealous. He blackened her eyes on one occasion, after an argument she declared, also testifying he struck her on the mouth and split her lip.

They were married November 10, 1925. Mrs. Burtt charges cruel and barbarous treatment.

SPRIGLE TO SEEK REPAYMENTS ON COUNTY ROAD JOBS

HIGH BIDDERS WHO GOT JOBS UNDER FIRE

Director Ray Sprigle, of the County Department of Property and Supplies, today said steps would be taken immediately for refunds by Joseph Gaudy, McKeesport contractor, and the W. J. Hasley Company, holders of contracts to furnish power shovels on county road projects.

Alfred Hirsch, head of the Contractors' Machinery and Supply Company, had informed Sprigle that his bid of $4 an hour for use of his power shovel still stands.

Further refund from the Hasley Company and Gaudy may come after Sprigle confers with Henry Butch, contractor, who is said to have withdrawn his low bid of $3.10 an hour to furnish shovels.

HIGH BIDDER WINS

Butch bid on a contract to supply a shovel on road work in Division Four. Hirsch's company was next with a $4 bid, while Gaudy asked $4.40 and was awarded the job. Butch was also low in a bid for Division No. 6, with Hirsch next. The Minsinger Company bid $5 and the Hasley Company, bidding $5.25, was given the award.

Butch is said to have withdrawn his bid for all work, but this is to be investigated.

Hirsch said W. W. Gill, county engineer in charge of the work, directed him to withdraw his bid. The Minsinger company held a contract for another district and was not eligible for the Division No. 6 work.

Hirsch's company also has another contract. If his bid is still entered, the Hasley company and Gaudy will be forced to do the work at the price of the lower bidder, according to Sprigle's plan.

TO CUT PAYMENTS

Sprigle said Gaudy will be paid $4 instead of $4.40 an hour and that the Hasley company $4 instead of $5.25. The county still holds payments due the two contractors. If Butch declares he has not withdrawn his bid, the price may drop still further. Gaudy will be asked to refund $112.40 and the Hasley company $99.50.

Sprigle said he would investigate also the hiring of trucks to see whether the offers of low bidders still are available.

MANSFIELD FOLLOWER

Gaudy is a political follower of Commissioner W. D. Mansfield. In addition to holding the power shovel contract he is carried on the county payroll as an assistant road foreman at a wage of 75 cents per hour.

Thomas A. Hasley, the new director of the County Department of Public Works, was associated with the Hasley company at the time of the contract. Taking office Monday, he said he had given up his connection with the company.

The money for the road improvements was alloted by the County Commissioners to provide work for unemployed. They divided the county into three zones, with a Commissioner in charge of each. The work takes the place of the county's contribution to the Emergency Association.

CURTIS H. GREGG RITES SATURDAY

GREENSBURG, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Funeral services will be held Saturday for former Representative Curtis H. Gregg, 68, who, political observers say, was slated for the post of United States District Attorney in Western Pennsylvania under the incoming Democratic administration.

Gregg, a staunch Democrat and friend of the late Champ Clark, speaker of the House, died at his home last night.

He was sent to Congress in 1910, representing what was then the Twenty-second Congression District, which comprised Westmoreland and Butler counties. He had vigorously supported the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt at the Chicago convention last summer.

Physicians say he never recovered from the shock of the sudden death of his son, George Gregg, several months ago. He leaves his widow and another son, James. Services will be held in the Zion Lutheran Church.

Killer Left to Law By Tongs Convicted

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A new era in settlement of Chinatown's disputes, once settled by hatchet men and tong wars, was heralded by police today with the conviction of Lew Mong Doon for slaying a member of a rival tong.

Lew was arrested in New York where he fled in fear of vengeance. After a conference between tong leaders in which Chinese agreed to let American justice take its course, the powerful Four Families paid $5,100 "blood money" to the slain man's family as indemnity.

Symbolical of taking a broader citizenship responsibility, students of the February 2 graduating classes of Pittsburgh high schools met in Memorial Hall yesterday to participate in a pageant climaxing an intensive citizenship training program.

Concluding the pageant, Judge Ralph H. Smith, of Common Pleas Court, addressed the students on "Responsibilities of the Young Citizen."

In a colorful patriotic sketch, Miss Bessie Davis, of Frick Training School, presided as "Liberty." John Challinor, representing Pittsburgh's high schools, portrayed "Democracy," and Miss Rose Bonacci was "Education."

Supt. Ben G. Graham received the students into "citizenship."

The Rev. John Ray Ewers pronounced the invocation and the Rev. Paul E. Campbell, superintendent of parochial schools, the benediction.

Suicide Messages Fail to Worry Man's Kin

Relatives of Albert B. McGary, 27, of 327 Werrick avenue, Washington, Pa., expressed little concern today over his disappearance and scoffed at the idea he had ended his life as indicated by notes distributed here. One of the notes, wrapped in a newspaper, was found on Liberty Bridge last night. Earlier in the day three men had found another note on the bridge. The missing man; relatives said, has disappeared before, but "usually shows up when he is hungry."

Father Saves Wife, Baby From Flames

When flames swept through a frame building at 1422 Adams street early today, Tony Nixey, 26, helped his wife and 3-months-old baby, Jane, over a four-foot fence to a neighboring yard.

The fire did $1,500 damage to the next-door home of Nixey's father, James Nixey, a barber. The elder Nixey family was in Greensburg attending a wedding celebration. The fire was caused by an overheated stove, police said.

Two thugs who slugged Isaac Morshun, of 1229 Fifth avenue, and robbed him of $140 in cash and $120 in checks and his automobile at Center avenue and Melwood street last night, were being sought by city detectives today.

CONVICTS SHUN PAROLES

In these depressing days the food and bed inside prison walls are preferred to freedom, according to Charles H. Austin, chief county probation officer.

Paroles from the county jail and workhouse have decreased. Those desiring freedom are old-timers who refuse to credit hard luck stories of new arrivals in the institutions, Austin said.

Ninety-nine per cent of the 1,189 men and women paroled for good behavior during the last year, are jobless and dependent on charity, Austin said his figures reveal. Each week four to five paroled prisoners apply at the probation office for recommittal.

Apparently poverty and enforced idleness do not seem to send the freed men back into crime. There are no more parole violators today than in the more prosperous years, Austin asserted.

Rich Widow, Kin Of Coolidge, Dies

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Mrs. Marshall H. Coolidge, widow of the late Minneapolis lumberman and manufacturer and active for many years in the social and civic life of Minneapolis, died last night at her home.

Mrs. Coolidge was a kin of the late former President Calvin Coolidge by marriage. Her husband died in May, 1925.

MRS. MEHARD WEDS RETIRED ARMY OFFICER

Mrs. Mary Kline Mehard, 50, divorced wife of Churchill B. Mehard, assistant county solicitor and former brigadier general of the Pennsylvania National Guard, was married at her apartment in Glen Osborne at noon today to Lucien B. Taliaferro, 51, of 5701 Stanton avenue, retired lieutenant colonel, United States Army.

Miss Agate Brown was the only attendant at the ceremony, performed by the Rev. Dr. Owen D. Odell. The couple left immediately for a short honeymoon.

Mrs. Taliaferro was granted a divorce in 1928 from Mehard, by Judge George V. Moore, on grounds of indignities. The Mehards were married in 1905.

Gang Shoots Man, Bullets Peril Child

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—Liquor racketeers seriously wounded an alleged liquor seller today, their bullets narrowly missing a 4-year-old girl and her parents asleep in their rooms in a Jamaica Plain apartment.

William Coffey, 21, was dropped by three bullets as he sat in his automobile. Two bullets crashed through the windows and over the beds of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph English and their daughter, Marion.

When Ward Bosses Ran Our Schools

He has his hands out again!

There are a lot of "juicy" jobs in the schools of Pittsburgh and the political gang wants to grab them. If public opinion doesn't raise a loud and vigorous protest, a bill putting the local Board of Education back into politics is expected to crop up in the Legislature within the next few weeks, perhaps sooner.

But Pittsburgh had a lesson with politically controlled schools—and it wasn't so long ago that it ought to be forgotten.

The schools were a "racket"—honeycombed with graft, vice and corruption. An outraged public demanded a change—and got it.

The Post-Gazette is reviewing this amazing story of politically controlled schools in a special series BEGINNING TOMORROW. Don't miss any part of it.

'PAINLESS' SALES TAX SUCCEEDS IN CANADA

Noted Writer Tells How Dominion Has Met Its Problem

By WALTER DAVENPORT

Excerpts from an article in Collier's Weekly of January 21, 1933. Reprinted by permission of the editor.

It was in the post-war daze of 1920 that Canada, casting about for ways and means to pay for the glory she had bought at Ypres and Cambrai, Mons and Vimy Ridge, adopted an ancient expedient for government income known broadly as the sales tax.

Like other nations scrambling more or less aimlessly and sometimes hopelessly to rebuild their exploded structures, retrieve what was left of the old order and set up a foundation for the unknown new, Canada was not devoting much of her attention to details. The thing was to get free of the general debris and then look around."

It was generally clear that new methods of taxation would have to be embraced and old ones revived if the groggy political systems were to be saved at all. Even income-producing devices that had failed, which had been rejected as economically unsound and socially unfair, would have to be resorted to in the name of emergency. And the financial schemes of 1914 were pitiful penny pots compared with what the times were demanding.

Home-Brewed Magic

In Canada, as elsewhere, a thousand and one new economists were taking to the nearest tree or mountain top to bellow their advice and advertise their home-brewed magic. But the general populace, busy with its own individual wounds, paid little attention. And Canada's editors were still devoting their pens and pages to the beauty and the symbolism of 52,000 Canadians whose bodies were enriching the soil of France.

Canada, preserving her wonted calm, was content to leave the political reconstruction to her political leaders — professional politicians—who proceeded without much hindrance to draw up a budget in which all the patent pick-me-ups and revolutionary catnip of the new financial dervishes were solemnly ignored. And they offered it to the Dominion Parliament without promises. If it were inadequate—well, it could be amended or rewritten. At any rate there it was—substantial, demonstrable, homely and very British, and it was adopted without any of the furor that surrounds fiscal measures today.

Snugly tucked away in that document was a scheme which, as far back as the Fifteenth-century kingdom of Naples, had been tried but rejected as politically dangerous. Spain had experimented with it but had decided that it produced more riots than cash. England, during and after her wars with France, had adopted it as a first-aid poultice to sick treasuries. The United States had utilized a makeshift version of it to finance her armies in the Civil War.

Never Survived

But the sales tax had never survived emergencies except in a few of the world's remaining autocracies, where little all-supreme princes had the power personally to impose and repeal, to make a law and break it as the humor took them. The reason for this lack of vitality was not so much in the sales tax's inherent weaknesses as in the unintelligent administration.

If it took the form of a straight sales tax, levying excises on the daily purchases of the populace, its first successes invariably encouraged its political beneficiaries to move the rate upward and onward, the aim of unwise governments being to find out just how much the traffic would bear. And they usually raised the rates until they had nice, messy rebellions on their hands. But if it was in the nature of a manufacturer's sales tax, such as Canada has developed, it frequently failed to get tested over a period of years, because the manufacturers objected. And the manufacturers were apt to be most important fellows in the schemes of political parties.

Nevertheless Canada adopted the sales tax without serious difficulty, because the thoughts of the people in 1920 were still out of focus. In a simpler and less irritating form it still obtains in the Dominion, almost forgotten by the wage-earning classes whose enemy it is supposed to be. Inasmuch as sales increase and decrease with the wealth of the people, it is not possible to say what percentage of Canada's income is derived from it. Neither can you strike an average for the 12 years it has operated in Canada, because it has been assessed at a variety of rates. It started out at 2 per cent; it is now 6. About all the traffic can stand.

Huge Yield Results

Yet, to give you some idea of its produce, in the lean fiscal year of 1931-32 Canada derived $42,379,932 from her sales tax at a 4 per cent rate. Her total revenue from taxation in that period was $296,272,396. This is merely a sample.

About a year ago a party of Representatives and Senators from Washington went to Canada at the expense of Mr. William Randolph Hearst, whose advocacy of the sales tax for the United States has been so violent that some of his editorial writers were proclaiming it as the ultimate solution of all taxation problems. They are a trifle over-enthusiastic. But the point is that certain members of the party, after their inquiries in Ottawa, appeared to be steeped in gloom.

Quite a number of these gentlemen will not be in the next Congress. The public careers were founded and sustained by their stanch championship of the wage earner. They were professional "friends of the people" and got away with it beautifully until their constituencies began to look into governmental matters on their own hook. But throughout the Canadian survey these members persisted in and out of hours in their efforts to find that the poor man, the farmer, organized labor and the white-collared wage earner were suffering under the Canadian sales tax.

But they failed. Their failure was not because the Canadian sales tax is a boon to the worker. It isn't. In no particular does it lighten his burden. But they did not succeed because the tax is so skillfully administered and the exemptions so adroitly designated that the Canadian worker is scarcely cognizant of its existence.

'Forgotten' Law

In fact you have almost to remind the average Canadian that there is such a law. I asked a large retail grocer about it—wherein he was affected, whether it increased his business expenses or made noticeable difference in his prices. He replied calmly:

"Yes, yes, we have a sales tax. That is, the manufacturers have. No, I can't say that it makes any difference here. You're about the first person to mention the sales tax to me for years. How does it look to you? Worth while?"

I asked a woolen goods wholesaler. He said:

"Sales tax? Why, I guess it's all right. I pay on what I import—pay a sales tax when I take my goods out of customs. But I guess it's all right. Got to pay taxes, you know. Oh, I suppose it could affect the price to retailers, but standard goods are standard goods, you know. If the retailer doesn't buy from me he'll buy more advantageously elsewhere. One has to watch that sort of thing, you know. You can't pass costs on so easily. Competition is very sharp."

The farmer offers no objection because the implements he uses and the products he raises are exempt. Similarly the miner, the lumberman and the fisherman are not taxed. Organized labor has seen to it that the ordinary necessities of life are largely exempt. And the man upon whom the tax falls, the manufacturer of finished products, has come to take a nice, philosophic view of the sales tax on the grounds that he is certain to be taxed anyway and that the sales tax is one of the mildest levies he can hope for.

(This instalment is the first of three from Walter Davenport's article in Collier's Weekly, "The Tax Nobody Notices." The second instalment will appear in an early issue, probably tomorrow.)

TAXATION MADE PLEASANT

Cartoon reproduced from Collier's Weekly by permission.

Investigation shows that the manufacturers' sales tax of Canada is the least objectionable tax that has probably ever been devised. "The tax," comments Walter Davenport, "is to skilfully administer and the exemptions so adroitly designated that the Canadian worker is scarcely cognizant of its existence.

Here's the Tax-Nobody Notices

For 12 years Canada has had a manufacturers' sales tax—a tax "so nearly invisible and so nearly painless" that the Canadian people have forgotten about it. But the government hasn't.

The sales tax has produced $750,000,000 for the Dominion treasury. In the current fiscal year, according to an official Ottawa report, a sales tax increase of $19,281,640 virtually offset a decrease of $24,523,128 in customs receipts, enabling the government to avoid a treasury difficulty.

Walter Davenport, author of the accompanying article, asked a local Canadian businessman if the sales tax injured his business. The businessman replied:

"You're about the first person to mention the sales tax to me for years."

MINERS BACK FIVE-DAY BILL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Estimating 310,000 coal miners are jobless, the United Mine Workers of America today threw their support back of the Black five-day week, six-hour bill.

Philip Murray, of Pittsburgh, vice president, told the Senate Judiciary subcommittee considering the legislation that a reduction in working hours is "a necessity in view of the increased use of machinery in the mines."

He presented statistics showing that the average tons mined per man a day was 5.30 in 1931, as compared with 2.56 in 1890. He said:

"The existing misery and distress and unemployment make the present the logical time for granting this needful relief."

"You don't have to drive over 40 to need the 100-mile-an-hour oil!"

YOU may like a pace that's safe and sane. You may never go faster than 40-miles-an-hour . . .

And still you need the 100-mile-an-hour motor oil—Gulf Supreme!

Why? Because the oil that is good at 100-miles-an-hour is doubly good at lesser speeds. Doubly able to give you good lubrication. It brings you extras no 60-mile-an-hour oil can give. Extra ability to conquer engine heat. Extra ability to halt wear. Extra richness. Extra stamina.

And proof of Gulf Supreme's extra "fighting quality" is its performance in two gruelling tests . . .

1. In the great Gulf laboratories, Supreme met the "oil killer" and won — successfully lubricated a testing motor developing nearly twice the heat of the normal speeding engine . . . for 14 hours!

2. At the famous Indianapolis Speedway, Supreme amazed racing drivers . . . In an Official A A A test, it successfully lubricated a roaring Duesenberg racer in a one-hour, non-stop run—at speeds which reached nearly two miles a minute! An average speed well over 100-miles-an-hour!

WARNING!
. . . OIL that isn't good at high speeds, isn't good enough at ANY speed!

Cut lubrication costs! Change to Gulf Supreme now. Watch it lower repair bills . . . prolong your motor's life . . . and last longer! There's a grade for every climate.

Remnant

I would give much if I could come to you
Bearing my love as one would bear a flower,
Lavish in praise, and anxious to undo
The muted silence of a nameless hour;
But I must come with wary word and glance,
Treading on ghosts half-stirring at my feet,
Stung with the poison of a dead romance—
Numb with old fears and burdened with deceit.

Oh, I am certain you can give me rest,
Free me from tears and quiet me for sleep;
But you must make a shabby deal at best,
Tending a lad whose wounds are strangely deep.

(What can you gain, as watching for the dawn,

The Retort Lovely

It must have been published before this, but we can't remember, anyway it belongs here. When George M. Cohan was so unhappy in Hollywood recently, he was irritated by an indifferent fellow who said:

"The supervisor says he can't see you for at least two hours."

"I see," said Cohan, who never kept anybody waiting in his grand career, "and what do you do around here?"

"I happen to be his assistant!" said the flip chap.

"Well," replied Mr. Cohan who really has good manners, "go back and tell him to put on his long pants—and now that makes you a messenger boy!

Gosh, Yes

"Evidently," says J. M. Josefsberg, "this Wilfred Grenfell, who said that English bedrooms are the coldest places in the world, never sat in a Broadway booking agent's office."

"And it is always 'a fact' because the guy who told him, knows a feller who knows a cousin who used to go around with a girl who went to school with your secretary! So here are some things I've heard about you: 1—You really don't write the column. A ten-dollar a week office boy does!—2—You dye your hair gray because you think it makes you look distinguished!—3—You and Mark Hellinger are the same person!—4—You roasted Greta Garbo because she turned you down for a date—5—You charge people so much per line to mention their names—6—The reason you didn't play the part given to Lee Tracy in that movie is that you didn't photograph well—7—You really are an underworld czar, and your present occupation is merely a cover-up! And in your column you use code to tip off gangsters and bootleggers when the police are on their trail!

"Isn't this all ridiculous? Particularly when I know on good authority that your name really isn't Wishnevitz, but Mefoofsky!"

Aw, Go Sit on a Tech!

We weary of these games quickly, too. Honest, this is the last batch: The Funnyboners say that Columbus came back as a circle . . . Tommy Milo says Washington came back as a bridge! . . . Barney Friedman's: Cain came back as a storehouse for Broadway flop shows. Swift as a ham. Prosperity as a movie. Homer as a four-base hit, and Van Dyck as a beard . . . Harold Seton's: Melba came back as a toast . . . Buck Davis': Lincoln as a highway . . . and Max Gendel wins the star position with: Washington came back as a heights. . . . Bryant came back as a phone exchange . . . Helen of Troy came back as a so-so movie . . . Ben Bernie (who hasn't been dead a year) returned as a race-horse! . . . Most of the Levys came back as Lee or Levee, and my check came back as anticipated!

One Man's Opinion

Elinson, writes Jerry Lanhee, may think that Bernie is a fugitive from a chain-gang (the missing link!), but Gracie Allen is making most of the air listeners fugitives from a crazy jane's gag!

Nifty

And Ray Mayer says that when Kate Smith met Milton Berle (who does everybody's act), she cried: "Hello EVERYBODY!"

Boomerang

Most of the Broadway shows are doing all they can to keep from closing. The players are accepting cuts in wages to aid the managers. One show-troupe accepted another slash last week rather than close—but one woman refused.

The manager was furious, but he evened matters this way. He makes the actress come to each performance, made up in costume, and she must stand by in the wings and suffer the terrible torture of watching her understudy—a small-town girl with little stage experience—play the same role—much better.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Dramatic pictures in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News show the burning of the $20,000,000 steamship "Atlantique," of the French-South American service, in the English Channel. Airplanes carrying Hearst Metrotone News cameramen set out from Le Bourget and were enabled to secure unusually graphic pictures of the tragedy in which 18 persons lost their lives. The Globe Trotter describes it.

After seven years in Nicaragua, the U. S. Marines are shown arriving home. First to reach American soil are 22 airplanes which arrive in Washington after their 3,000 mile flight. A Hearst Metrotone plane meets them and flies in the squadron over the Capital. In San Diego, Cal., officers and 291 men are shown disembarking.

Thrilling pictures of the skating contests at Newburgh, N. Y., are presented. The racing winners include Allan Potts, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Alex Hurd, of Canada, as well as Kid Klein, of Buffalo, sensational woman skater. There are also pictures of the ski jumping contests at Cary, Ill.

Prof. Auguste Piccard, the highest flier of them all, is seen and heard as he arrives in New York. He is greeted by his brother, Jean, of Wilmington, Del.

A Good Word for Poor Nero; Broadway Cuts Rates; Paris Actors Cheap

By GEORGE SEIBEL

If there are any members of the Nero family around, they could sue Cecil B. DeMille for defamation of their illustrious ancestor in the Nixon Theater. For Nero, like Richard III, was not as black as he is painted. Trajan, one of his successors, said the first five years of Nero's reign were the best of any Roman emperor. Marcus Aurelius called him a "beast," but that was many years later, when propaganda had done its dirty work.

Mr. Seibel

Nero was not responsible for the great fire, nor were the Christians—it started in some wooden shops near the Coliseum and would not have amounted to much if there had not been a high wind. The legend that Nero played the lyre and recited his verses about the burning of Troy is a legend. Nero was unpopular because he was more Greek than Roman, and more artist than politician. One conspiracy against him was joined by Lucan because of literary jealousy.

As to the Christians who were . . . there is also another side to that picture. Rome for centuries tolerated every religion and erected altars to every god. But this new sect was under suspicion of sedition, not heresy. They were regarded as Communists and Bolshevists are now regarded—and this will be understood by anybody who reads the Epistle of James, who said "rich men oppress you" and declared the rich would "weep and howl."

But Nero's family are all dead, and the early Christians have a good advocate in Arthur Hohl as Titus—so there will be no effort to get an injunction against "The Sign of the Cross" in the Nixon.

CUT RATES NOW REGULAR

It looks as if there will probably be a scaling down of theater prices within the next year. Although seats for the New York opening of the Lunt-Fontanne-Coward "Design for Living" are selling at $11, that is no criterion. Five of the leading Broadway attractions have just cut their prices. "Walk a Little Faster," with Clark and McCullough and Beatrice Lillie, has come down from $4 to $2.50. "Another Language," the biggest Broadway success of last season, will have a top price of $1.50 for the remaining weeks of its run.

This is a move in the right direction—a popular theater should have popular prices. In Berlin I have seen performances of classic plays, like Lessing's "Nathan the Wise," at 50 cents for a very good balcony seat. Max Pohl was the Nathan—and it happened to be his 80th birthday, or something like that—and the audience insisted on making speeches between the acts to congratulate him. If you go to the German Cinema this week to see "Karamazov," you will see this fine actor, Max Pohl playing the elder Karamazov.

WOES OF COMEDIE FRANCAIS

Troubles of financial nature are not confined to the theaters of America. The great Theatre Francais has just passed through a financial crisis of the most acute kind. The French government had to have money, and instead of saving the money on its army and navy, which is the best place for any government to save money, they reduced the annuity of their famous theater—just about cut it in half.

This brought out some curious facts. It was learned that the funds of the Comedie are deposited with the "Mont de Piete," the pawnshops of Paris, and drew only 3 per cent. This has been increased to 4 per cent, but that does not mend matters much.

The dean of the societaires, as the members of the stock company are called, receives only about $2,700 a year. Many so-called comedians in America, who are only glorified clowns, get more than that every week. Still we wonder why art does not pay!

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"The Sign of the Cross," screen version of the Wilson Barrett play, now showing twice daily in the Nixon, will be held for a second week, but not longer, it is announced. The engagement of this lavish Cecil B. DeMille production is thus extended to curtain time, Saturday, January 28. In the featured roles are Frederic March, Elissa Landi, Claudette Colbert and Charles Laughton, but there are more than a score of other speaking parts and thousands of extras appearing as Roman citizens.

Through an oversight no mention was made of Fletcher Henderson's Orchestra in yesterday's review of the Show Boat floor show. And that's no way to treat one of the "name" bands of the country, and one of the most popular features of the Show Boat bill.

John H. Harris, of the Harris Amusement Company, accompanied by Mrs. Harris, formerly the popular screen actress, Lucille Williams, will sail from New York Saturday to spend a month in Europe. At the weekly luncheon of the Variety Club yesterday, Mr. Harris received many hearty wishes for "bon voyage." Incidentally, it was reported at the luncheon that last Sunday's show for the benefit of the club's ward, Catherine Variety Sheridan, was very much of a success financially.

"Alien Corn," Katharine Cornell's next production, the second for this season, will have a preliminary tour before it is seen in her own theater, The Belasco, in New York. Casting is under way, with two leading male roles to be filled before rehearsal begins. Among those already engaged for "Alien Corn," which is by Sidney Howard, are Charles Waldron, who played the father in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street;" Sigried Rumann, who played Preysing in "Grand Hotel;" Lily Cahill, Jessie Busley, Charles D. Brown and E. J. Ballantine.

English Girl Comes Back

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 19.—Dozens of actresses, disappointed in their search for Hollywood recognition, are watching, taking heart from the sudden turn in the fortunes of Lillian Bond, pretty English girl and 1932 Wampas baby star.

Yesterday, Lillian signed with Paramount to play with Sylvia Sidney and George Raft in "Pickup." Simultaneously, if shooting schedules can be arranged, she will go into the new Maurice Chevalier picture, "A Bedtime Story."

Good parts these for any girl, but particularly Lillian, because, long ago, Hollywood said she was through.

First she fluked out on a term contract at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Then she repeated the unhappy experience at Warner Brothers. Casting directors shook their heads. When jobs came up, they chose other girls.

And then along came Playwright Benn W. Levy. He picked her for the demure murderess in the Hollywood production of "Springtime For Henry." She made a hit. Next he got her a job at Universal in "The Old Dark House." She clicked in this shocker, and she scored even more decisively as the amorous siren in "Air Mail."

Now, with parts coming in rapidly, the jinx seems to be completely broken. It will re-ignite confidence in many a discouraged actress.

Broadways Of the World

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

ABOARD THE PARIS-BERLIN EXPRESS.—In about two hours I'll be in Berlin. It's still dark out and I should be snoring as peacefully as the guy in the next compartment. But I can't sleep. So, by pounding out this stuff, I will accomplish two things. Not only will I complete a column, but I will also awaken the bird in the next compartment.

I had an experience last night that I thought was swell. Once again it has to do with customs officials, and I trust you don't mind.

Traveling with ordinary luggage is bad enough, but, as I pointed out once before, you are a marked man the moment you attempt to move about with motion picture film.

I was warned about the German customs long before I got on this train.

"Watch out," I was told. "You haven't the slightest idea of what they might do to you. It's tough enough to get through with a little American money and a few cigarets. But film! Boy, that's one rap you'll have a tough time beating."

This didn't come from one person; it came from at least 10. So, after being systematically robbed by everyone in my last two hours in Paris; you can imagine my state of mind when this train finally pulled out.

Well, there's one thing that Hellinger has learned while traveling, and that is that a little extra dough handed out here and there can save a great deal of trouble.

The proper places were a bit difficult to find because, on the entire train, there was but one attendant who spoke English—and even he was no Jimmy Durante. But money is a universal language, and nobody refused to accept my tips. I handed one bird in a uniform a fair-sized bill, for which he thanked me profusely.

In due time, however, the results were evident. Various porters stepped into my compartment with different trays and barked at me in strange lingos. Other porters placed pillows behind my back to make me more comfortable.

"I can assure you, sir," he assured me, "that I will help you a great deal with the customs officers. They will join the train on the border and will reach your compartment about 1 o'clock in the morning."

"Fine stuff," I returned. "I certainly appreciate what you're doing for me. Do they—do they make much of a search?"

He shook his head.

"Not with the fine American gentleman. Of course, they can make much trouble if they so wish. It depends entirely upon what the gentleman carries. Have you many cigarets?"

"Not too many," I replied. "Let's see. I've got about 20 packs of Camels, about 15 packs of Lucky Strikes, the same amount of Chest———"

A look of horror in his eyes made me stop.

"My heavens, sir," he cried, "you will be in much trouble! Throw them away, sir. Throw them away! Nothing is worse than carrying so many cigarets. Positively nothing!"

"So?" I said nervously, "That's bad news. But tell me, how about motion picture film?"

"Motion picture film!" he repeated. "Film for the cinema! Oh, pray that the gentleman has none of that in the baggage car. Nothing is worse than motion picture film. Postively nothing!"

When the customs officers finally came around I received the shock of my life. There were three of them, and two of the three spoke excellent English. Instead of being arrogant, they were highly courteous. They asked me if I had money to declare, and I told them I had. They gave me a written acknowledgment of my letter of credit and actually thanked me for producing it.

They wanted to know about cigarets. Guided by the actions of the attendant earlier in the evening, I had decided that inspection was the better part of valor. I pointed to the packages that were lying openly on the bed—and they assured me that, so long as I had been honest enough to declare them, it was okay to keep them.

I must have glowed with pleasure. It proved conclusively to me that honesty is the best policy after all. What they would have done if they had found the 30 packages I had hidden is something I will not go into at the moment.

They asked me if I had big baggage in the baggage car, and I said I had. Whereupon the three gentlemen said they were going to have a bite to eat, and that they would examine my big luggage later. With courteous bows, they moved on. And I'm stating right here and now that, no matter what else happens on this trip, I will never forget the decency of those three men. They gave me a pleasant impression of Germany that I will never forget.

But all that is beside the point. My large luggage was yet to be examined. And since the three officers were going into the diner—that, too, was the place for me. I marched right in behind them.

It was going on 2 in the morning and the diner was, of course, deserted. I called the stewart over and, in a combination of French, German and English, told him that I wanted to buy drinks for everyone who was employed in the car. If I could get my baggage through without any trouble it would be the cheapest investment I ever made.

Well, in no time at all, we were all buddies. One drink followed another and, before I knew it, the chief steward was dancing with the waiter who had served me the dinner. The customs officials enjoyed two bottles of Rhine wine, the cook was drinking beer after beer and the chief conductor was getting cockeyed on German brandy.

What an experience it all was! I'll swear to you that I don't know when I've been so happy. There I sat, joining in German songs that I had never heard before—but singing just the same! They made me feel as though I was part of their party.

Eventually, my baggage was examined. It proved to be more or less of a formality. No trouble. No questions. No worry. And I finally returned to my compartment with a grin from ear to ear and a joyous song in my heart. My baggage had been cleared. I had nothing more to worry about. And I had staged a party I would not forget until my dying day.

The money had been well spent . . .

We have about half an hour still to go, and the attendant who speaks English just rapped at my door. He asked me if all my baggage was ready for inspection at the Berlin station. I laughed.

"You're too late," I told him, jovially. "It was all examined last night. I'm finished."

"Oh, no, sir," was his reply. "That was only for the train. The real inspection comes in Berlin!"

Great Prison Film Basis

Sing Sing Prison, Ossining, New York, which is the setting for the First National picture "Twenty Thousand Years in Sing Sing," featuring Spencer Tracy, coming to the Stanley Friday, is the most famous of all penal institutions on the North American continent.

Several other American prisons are older—notably those at Charlestown, Mass., Eastern Penitentiary at Philadelphia, and the State Penitentiary at Columbus, O., but none have achieved the notoriety and reputation that has belonged to the "big house" on the banks of the Hudson River, scarcely an hour's ride north of New York City.

Within the last year, the attention of the American public has been sharply focused upon Sing Sing by the monumental work that issued from the pen of its warden, Lewis E. Lawes. Under the title "Twenty Thousands Years in Sing Sing," Warden Lawes, admittedly one of the foremost authorities on prison conditions, administration and reform in the United States, sets forth the memoirs of his long wardenship in terms that took hold of the popular imagination with the force of a best-selling work of fiction. He described the system largely responsible for putting into effect at Sing Sing Prison.

It is on the book by Warden Lawes that the Stanley feature, opening tomorrow, is based.

O. P. Heggie Gets Role In Lasky Film

Jesse L. Lasky, independent producer for Fox, has engaged O. P. Heggie to play the role of "Dr. Grunbaum" in "Zoo in Budapest," Mr. Lasky's first film for Fox in which Loretta Young and Gene Raymond are to have the leading parts. Wade Boteler has been cast for a leading part in "I Am Guilty of Love," which already boasts a cast including Boots Mallory, Alexander Kirkland, Ralph Morgan and Irene Ware.

Sylvia Sidney Signs Up

Sylvia Sidney started her third year as a Paramount screen star by signing a new long-term contract with that company. Her new agreement was concluded as she was preparing to head the cast of "Pick Up," an adaptation of Vina Delmar's novel in which she will appear with George Raft and William Harrigan.

Miss Sidney came to the Paramount studios in January, 1931, after her work as the star of "Bad Girl" on the New York stage. Within a few months after her arrival she was an established favorite, her rise in popularity being one of the quickest in screen history.

Her first role was in "City Streets" in which she was cast overnight when illness prevented Clara Bow from playing the stellar role. During the two years she has been in motion pictures Miss Sidney also has headed the casts of "Street Scene," "An American Tradegy," "Ladies of the Big House," "The Miracle Man," "Merrily We Go to Hell" and "Madame Butterfly."

REDUCE WITHOUT THYROID WITHOUT SALTS WITHOUT DIET

Science finds only absolutely safe way to lose ugly fat.

Here's wonderful news for women who want to make their figures slim and lovely. A great physician, who has specialized in research with the Pasteur Institute of Paris and famous clinics of America, has discovered an absolutely harmless tablet that will take off 5 pounds of ugly fat each week.

Now it is absurd for anyone to take dangerous drugs, or a daily dose of laxative salts that rushes food through the system half digested, and leads to chronic constipation. The new treatment contains no Thyroid Extract, no laxative drugs at all. It is a safe, natural regulator of the digestive ferments (Lipases) which control the production of fat in all human bodies.

You don't have to starve yourself or go through painful exercises. You simply take the tablets each day and continue to eat three ample meals. The fat disappears at just the places where you want to lose it. We will donate $500 to charity if anyone can prove that Vannay contains Thyroid, Iodine or any harmful drugs.

Start the treatment at once and all your fondest dreams of health and slim loveliness will come true. Ask your druggist for Vannay and be sure to see that name on the package. If you are not entirely satisfied, money back.

A CLEAR-HEADED TALK ABOUT HEAD-COLDS

Common sense tells you to use Vapex —the inhalant—for safe, quick relief

TESTS PROVE SUPERIORITY OF VAPEX

Unbiased tests by a prominent medical research laboratory prove that the vapor of a single drop of Vapex kills dense colonies of germs present in head-colds. In exactly similar tests, other inhalants (often offered as substitutes for Vapex) were shown to be greatly inferior in germ-killing power.

Many cheaper imitations of Vapex are said to be "just as good." But Science proves they are not. Vapex has a remarkable germ-killing power. This is the extra value that Vapex brings you at very little extra cost.

A HEAD-COLD is really an inflammation of the breathing passages. And the natural and quickest way to relieve it is by breathing Vapex. It is difficult to reach these hidden passages with sprays, drops, salves, or gargles, but Vapex gets to the seat of a head-cold with the first breath.

That is why millions of people breathe Vapex. Just a few drops on your handkerchief and at the ends of your pillow give you twenty-four-hour relief. Pleasant and easy relief, too, because Vapex is as refreshing as mountain air.

Yet the vapor kills germs that swarm in the nasal passages during a cold. The germ-killing power of Vapex plus its penetrating power make Vapex a remarkably effective means of relieving every head-cold. Scientific tests by an unbiased medical research laboratory prove both these facts.

Try the easy Vapex way of relieving your next cold. Now sold at the reduced price of 75c a bottle at all druggists. Insist on V-A-P-E-X.

ILLUSION:

One of Houdini's most spectacular escape feats was performed with a huge milk can filled with water. He invited persons of the audience to bring padlocks and lock him into the can. He got into the can, the lid was put on and fastened with several padlocks. A screen was placed in front of the can. Assistants stood by with stop watches and fire axes to save him from drowning after a certain time. About a minute later, the screen was removed, Houdini was seen panting and dripping . . . the padlocks remaining intact!

EXPLANATION:

The usual method of escaping from a milk can is as follows: The lid of the can is apparently securely padlocked to the lower portion, but actually the metal band to which the staples are attached is the top of a short inner lining. The performer, after being locked into the can, pushes the lid upward with his head and the short inner lining is forced out of place, permitting his escape. The screen is then removed.

...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

What exciting magic there is in cigarette advertising!

Let's look at one of its greatest illusions...that cigarettes can be mysteriously given superior "FLAVOR."

THE EXPLANATION: Just three factors control the flavor of a cigarette. The addition of artificial flavoring...the blending of various tobaccos...and the quality of the tobaccos themselves. Quality is the most important. Artificial flavoring can never wholly disguise the poor flavor of cheap tobaccos. The blending of several cheap, raw tobaccos cannot improve the flavor of any of them. A fine cigarette is a cigarette blended from costly, ripe tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

This is why the Camel flavor has never been rivaled...why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made.

In more costly tobaccos lies the secret of Camels' delicate "bouquet"...of their rich, cool flavor—of their non-irritating mildness. It's the tobacco that counts.

All the natural goodness of Camel's tobacco is kept fresh and rich for you by the air-tight, welded Humidor Pack. Don't remove it. Its moisture-proof cellophane also protects your Camels from dust and germs. Put a pack in your pocket today.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Love That Weathers Storms Often Becomes Stronger

Lora's husband, who had once thought he loved another woman, wanted her to let bygones be bygones and try to start over again. He swore that he would never wander again—that he had found that he really loved her.

"But how can I do it? How can I ever trust him again?" she sobbed.

Mrs. J. R. lived through a story like that once, too, and she wants to tell us about it. Here she is.

Dear Elsie—

May I answer Lora's letter? I want to say, "Lora, forgive your husband. Take him back, and forget as soon as possible."

Three years ago, my husband left me for someone else, after eight years together; but after a few days he came back, confessed his mistake and begged me for another chance. He got it, and now I cannot doubt his love for me.

I have never regretted trying again, and I am sure Lora won't either. It won't be easy at first Lora, I know. For a while I thought that I could never stand it. Every time he took me in his arms I could see her in my place. I would imagine him whispering the same endearments to her that he did to me, until I thought I would go mad.

But after I took him back we talked it all out calmly, and promised never to mention that chapter in our lives again. And that is what you must do, if you give him a second chance.

TRUST WILL RETURN

Never mention it again. Never nag, or throw it up to him when you get mad. Never cry in front of him.

If you must cry, wait until he has gone to work, then cry it out by yourself.

I know that it seems impossible now to forget or even to forgive, but even if you don't completely forget, the pain will gradually go away and your trust will come back.

Try not to let it make you hard. That doesn't help. It just keeps things from adjusting themselves. So please give him his chance.

You will find that he loves you more than ever, for understanding. We all make mistakes, and I am sure that he has learned his lesson, just as my husband did, and will never stray away from you again. So give him your faith and a real chance.

It is up to you whether you can forgive and forget and find happiness—a happiness all the greater for this trial and this hour of unhappiness.

Best of luck to you!

MRS. J. R.

A DEEPER LOVE

That's a fine letter, Stranger! And chock full of truth! You have found the real answer to how to find happiness in this troubled world. Forgive and forget, and give the other fellow a chance to come back when he stumbles, realizes he has stumbled, and wants to get along again.

It is hard to do that sometimes. But actually a love that has met storms and weathered them—and gone on—is often stronger and deeper than a love that has never had any upsets, because it is more mellow and tolerant, more understanding and more sure of itself, for the reason that it has been tried and has come through.

You're great! And here's my hand to you!

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Underwood Delays a Storm of Jealousy

"There is a man back in the hills a few miles who considers himself under deep obligations to me—and justly, too," Dr. Barnes said slowly. "I was able to save him once from something most unpleasant, and he is grateful enough to do for me anything I ask.

"From his mountain farm you can get by good roads to three main thoroughfares, and he has shacks enough on the place to house a regiment. At least, it looked that way to me the last time I was there. Whatever men or material you wish to conceal there until they are needed, will be as secure from observation as it is humanly possible to make them. Just give me time in the morning to drive over there and see him. I'll go early, and I'm sure you can make your headquarters there indefinitely."

"Let us hope that we won't need him longer than tomorrow night," Hugh said quickly, and I knew that he had heard Lillian's quickly indrawn breath. "But you have relieved my mind greatly. I can concentrate everything there tomorrow and get ready for action."

Dicky got up and stretched his arms above his head with apparent nonchalance; but I had caught the dancing light in his eyes, and knew that my premonition of resentment against Hugh on his part would soon be justified. Unconsciously my eyes went to those of Harry Underwood. If anyone could manage my temperamental husband, he could.

DICKEY WARNED

"You don't need me any longer, do you, Dad?" Dicky asked my father, with all his usual deference in his tone. "The only part I've got in this thing is to stay in the air, and while it doesn't amount to much, it does make a fellow sleepy. If I have to get up in time to drop that note to our kidnaper friends, I'd like to hit the hay pronto. What say, mein frau? Ready to go with me?"

I made a hurried, purposely eager assent.

"Oh, yes, Dicky; any time you say."

Harry Underwood raised his big figure from his chair, and going over to Dicky took him deftly by the coat collar and set him down in the chair again. As he did so he said something from the side of his mouth that no one caught but Dicky. That it was an adjuration of some kind, and an effective one, I guessed when my Peter Pan first stiffened angrily, then grinned up at his friend.

"Who gave you any license to talk about sleep?" Mr. Underwood growled. "To quote a classic of the prize ring, 'who-in-'ell's been holdin' my umbrella over Mitchell?'—for whom interpret the rest of us. You stay put right here, or — here's a bright thought—there's no need keeping the femmes here any longer, is there, Chief? All the main points of this thing have been decided. The rest of this stuff is simply routine, for, of course, we can't plan the final ambush until the Dicky bird makes his report tomorrow."

RETURN TO HOTEL

"No, there is no possible reason for them to stay any longer tonight," my father said.

"Then we ought to get back as soon as possible," Lillian said briskly. "If Helena wakes and finds me gone, Sam's suspicions are apt to be aroused."

"Then, old socks," Harry Underwood resumed, with a grin at Dicky, "suppose you run our wives over to the hotel, and then get back here as soon as the Lord will let you."

"All right," Dicky acquiesced promptly, but I noticed that Harry Underwood was close to him every second until we were all in the car, and just as we drove away I caught a low murmur not intended for our ears:

"If you get temperamental over this thing, I'll take you apart in inch sections."

Dicky chuckled, as he invariably does at his old friend's nonsense, but he hardly spoke all the way home, and his hurried good-by kiss was distinctly perfunctory.

"Better go straight to bed," he cautioned softly, as he opened the hotel door. "I don't know how long we'll be."

"All right," Lillian answered. "If Helena happens to roam around, let her find us apparently asleep," Lillian said.

But it was not Helena who came wild-eyed to my door an hour later. When I drew the bolt at a soft, insistent tapping, Ronald caught me by the arm.

"He's gone out again," he whispered.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

The Pancreas Plays a Vital Part in Your Life

What do you know about pancreas? You should know about it because the pancreas is the most important digestive gland of the body. It is located in the abdomen just beneath the liver, crossing the middle of the abdomen.

Dr. Copeland

The pancreas is important in the maintenance of good health. We cannot live without it. It produces certain secretions which have much to do with the digestion of our foods, particularly the fats, starches and proteins.

These secretions or juices contain substances which are known to the scientific world as "enzymes." They are rather mysterious things, but possess pretty definite powers. For example, one of these, called "lipase," acts on the fats in the food which has been consumed. "Trypsin" is the name of the enzyme or ferment which digests protein. "Amylase" is the one which digests starches.

Without these enzymes, digestion would be impossible and the body could not obtain the nourishment it must have. The enzymes work in conjunction with the bile and other secretions of the liver and stomach.

Though tremendous advances have been made in our present knowledge, there still remain many unsolved mysteries concerning the pancreas. For example, it is known that in diabetes there is a lack of certain necessary secretion, which is believed to come from the pancreas.

When there is a deficient supply of this substance the body is unable to take care of sugar in the diet. In consequence, sugar accumulates within the body and causes serious damage to the internal organs. In mild cases this condition can be corrected by diet. Where diet alone is not sufficient, insulin is given by the doctor.

Under normal conditions the pancreas secrete insulin. This substance permits normal digestion of sugar. Fortunately, it is now possible to prepare by artificial means a substitute for natural insulin. This has an effect simlar in its effects to the insulin secreted by the pancreas.

As yet, we have not discovered why the pancreas is interfered with in its normal secretion of insulin. We have not learned how to prevent this failure to function.

The pancreas may become diseased from infection. This results in a condition called "pancreatitis." Chronic pancreatitis is a serious and often fatal disease.

Like other organs in the body, the pancreas is subject to tumor growths and cancer. There may be cysts, abscesses, tuberculosis, and other constitutional disturbances.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

All bound round with a headdress is becoming the fashion again o'nights. One girl wears a white tulle cap with silver lame twisted round like the old over-the-ear-braided coiffure. A tiny tulle veil just covers the eyebrows.

A good deception is that of the wide shoulder line that makes us all look so slim. A new evening frock of dark blue and gold brocade has wide shoulder crests lined with rose-colored ribbon, the same ribbon being used for a girdle.

Why not a wool evening frock, now that that fabric is as soft and supple as silk? A lovely model is of deep green, soft, spongy woolen with big puff dots in the weave.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Taking Your Tricks

Sometimes it is the height of unwisdom at the Bridge table to take a trick with an Ace or King if it advances the interests of your adversaries by the establishment of a suit in their hands on which discards of losers may be obtained. However, there are other hands in which the factor of time requires that the defensive tricks be taken as quickly as possible. Take, for instance, the hand below, which was recently played in a Rubber game at Crockford's Club, New York.

North—Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | ♠ A K 8 3♡ A 7◇ K 7 4 3♣ K 7 3 | |
| ♠ J 6♡ 8◇ Q J 10 9 6♣ J 9 8 5 4 | NorthWest EastSouth | ♠ 10 9 5 2♡ 9 6◇ A 8 2♣ A 10 6 2 |
| | ♠ Q 7 4♡ K Q J 10 5 4 3 2◇ 5♣ 0 | |

The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 3 ♠ | Pass | 4 ♡ | Pass |
| 6 ♡ | Double (1) | Pass | Pass |
| Pass | | | |

1—Perhaps a doubtful Double, in view of the freakish nature of the bidding, but East felt that the spade suit could not afford discards for losers, and, in view of North's Raise to a Slam, that the heart suit was probably not of more than seven cards in length.

The Opening lead was the diamond Queen, upon which the King was played from Dummy, and East won with the Ace. Now, if East had laid down the Ace of clubs, this story would not have been written, as the contract must inevitably have been defeated 1 trick. However, East decided that this course was not necessary, and thought there might be a way to defeat the contract—not 1 trick, but 2. Hence, he returned a small diamond, which was ruffed in the South hand, and then seven rounds of trumps were laid down in succession. East was squeezed, and on the last trump was forced to discard the Ace of clubs in order to hold protection against the run of the spade suit, which had been kept intact in the Dummy. South then laid down the Queen of clubs and won the last 3 tricks with the Ace-King-Queen of spades.

East's failure on this hand was due to the fact that he failed to take into consideration soon enough the possibility that South did hold eight or more hearts. It was even possible that he might hold nine, and thus his only chance of defeating the contract was to have immediately played the club Ace, as otherwise the squeeze was practically certain to become effective.

Today's Question

Both sides vulnerable. West bids one club, North bids one diamond, and East bids one spade. Should South make any bid, holding the following hand?

♠ 4 ♡ 7 6 3 2 ◇ A 6 4 3 2 ♣ 6 4 3

Answer: Yes. South should bid two diamonds, as the hand contains 4 playing tricks in support of partner's diamond Overcall. The Raise is very important in this situation, in order to deprive the opponents of as many bids as possible in the lower stages of bidding, and also to inform North as to how high an Overcall will prove profitable.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Response to Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a reader of your column, and I wish you would inform me if the following is a correct form of acceptance to a formal invitation:

Mr. Henry Clark Allen accepts with pleasure your kind invitation for luncheon at the Hotel St. Moritz on Sunday, January the eighteenth, at one o'clock.
San Francisco, California.
January tenth

Or should it read:

Mr. Henry Clark Allen accepts with pleasure the kind invitation of Mr. and Mrs. George Runyon Tipton for luncheon at the Hotel St. Moritz on Sunday, January the eighteenth, at one o'clock.
San Francisco, California.

A.

The second form is the correct one. The entire wording of the acknowledgment should be kept in the third person. And the "your" of your first form is, of course, in the second person.

Also, it is better form to space the acknowledgment as the invitation was spaced. Like this:

Mr. Henry Clark Allen
accepts with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. George
Runyon Tipton's kind invitation
at the Hotel St. Moritz on Sunday,
the eighteenth of January
at one o'clock

It is not necessary to add the name of the place from which we are answering, or the date. Often, indeed, this gives an impression of cluttering up the acknowledgment, which should contain only the necessary phrases.

The Tea Ball

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When tea is served in a cafe or restaurant, with a tea ball in it, should the tea ball be removed before drinking the tea?

2—When a young man and a young lady go to a dance together should they dance the first and last dance together?

S.

1—Yes, indeed!

2—Yes, and also the dances before and after the supper intermission.

In a few days you'll see what others see—how much better Kolynos cleans teeth. They'll look whiter—shades whiter. They'll feel much cleaner. Here's the reason: Kolynos does what ordinary toothpastes can't do. As it removes ugly stain and tarnish—it foams into every tiny crevice and kills millions of germs that are the known cause of most tooth and gum troubles. Thus Kolynos gives RESULTS YOU CAN SEE. Cleaner, whiter teeth. Healthier looking gums. Give up incompetent ways of brushing and start using the Kolynos technique—a half-inch of this remarkable dental cream on a dry brush twice a day. It's the better, quicker way to cleaner, whiter teeth—try it.

DUEL AT CENTER PITT-IRISH FEATURE

REMEMBERING THAT IT was Ed (Moose) Krause who did the bulk of the work for Notre Dame when the Irish defeated Pitt in two basketball games last season, Panther followers have been looking forward to the opportunity of seeing this same Krause up against Claire Cribbs, crack sophomore center for the Oakland university. For a time it looked as though this treat would be denied them, as Cribbs went down with a twisted ankle, but it develops that the rangy Jeannette lad will be back in harness Saturday night ready to face the Irish—and Krause.

Ed Krause

Moose, a giant tackle on the Notre Dame football teams of the last two seasons, is one of the most versatile athletes in the country. Despite his 220 pounds, he gets around on the basketball floor like a lightweight, and his play at the foul line has been a big factor in many of Notre Dame's victories. If Cribbs, an active, keen defensive player, can make it an interesting evening for Krause, the Panthers hope to hold their lead over Notre Dame in basketball. The series stands at five games to four in favor of the locals.

THE NOTRE DAME passers had one bad streak this season, losing four consecutive games while Leo Crowe was out with injuries, but they have won steadily since his return. They hold a decision over Northwestern, one of the two teams to beat the Panthers, and recently gave Minnesota, previously defeated by Pitt, a severe trouncing.

The return of Crowe means the continuance of a side feature of the Pitt-Irish floor series. Not once since their first appearance here in 1928 have the South Bend passers visited Pittsburgh without having one of that famous family in the lineup. Another member of the Irish football team, besides Krause, on the basketball squad, is Al McGuff, remembered for his desperate forward-passing attempts in the closing minutes of the gridiron game at the Stadium last October.

EVIDENTLY VERNON GOMEZ does not expect his holdout to last long, as the young southpaw, now in New York, is already talking about the training trip and predicting the Yanks will win another pennant.

Gomez figures that New York's chief opposition has been balanced, remarking that while the Senators figure to be a little tougher the A's figure to be a little weaker, and that, all in all, the Yanks ought not to have any more trouble than they had last year.

RARELY HAS A major league baseball club lost so many old landmarks in a single year as are missing from the roster of the A's for 1933. Since Joe Boley, who had been with the team since 1927, was released last May, Connie Mack has dropped Jimmy Dykes, who first joined the White Elephants in 1917; Eddie Rommel, who had served since 1920; Al Simmons, a star regular since 1924; George Haas, a member since 1928, and death has taken Kid Gleason, one of the diamond's oldest figures and a Machian lieutenant and coach since 1926.

Wesley Ferrell

CLEVELAND HAS NO doubt that Pitcher Wesley Ferrell sooner or later will be a member of the 1933 holdout club started by Babe Ruth. That would be a safe guess under any conditions, as Ferrell in past years balked at every contract ever offered to him.

This time a holdout by the star right-hander is considered even more certain than usual. For not only did Ferrell tip off his chosen course by notifying the Indian management some time ago that he believed his work in 1932 entitled him to an increase over the $18,000 paid to him, but on top of that, instead of getting a boost he has been given a cut.

THAT LIGHT HARNESS racing, if it wishes to carry popular appeal, must abolish the present system of scoring and adopt the standing start from a barrier, is the revolutionary idea advanced for the trotting and pacing game.

That was the verbal bombshell tossed at the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Driving Club, of Boston, one of the leading Eastern harness organizations, by Allen J. Wilson, a prominent reinsman and race meet promoter of that region.

WILSON CONTENDS THAT the long delays under the present system of starting harness races hurts the sport because they kill the interest of the public, which, he says, wants to see a race and not merely a lot of preparation for one. Once the horses get away, the average race goer enjoys the contest, so the Eastern veteran believes that competition must be maintained almost from the time the horses face the starter. Another improvement that Wilson thinks would appeal to the public, and one that he says must come, is more handicap events. Many fast horses that can go just over two minutes almost every time out have things all their own way in some races. If they were handicaped, Wilson argues, the result would be in doubt until the final surge up the stretch.

WILLIE TEVIS, polo player, won a bet of $5,000 when he rode a horse 200 miles in less than 10 hours. The trick was done in a small indoor arena in San Francisco, where every turn was banked. Some Army officers had the losing end of the wager.

These officers, who had ridden approximately 150 miles outdoors in one day, said the 200-mile stunt couldn't be done, and they paid for their doubts. It was this same Tevis who discovered the famous polo pony, Blue Cloud, now ridden by Winston Guest. Tevis found the pony drawing a milk wagon on the West Coast.

A NAME FAMOUS in Notre Dame football history is due for a big revival in the gridiron doings of the Irish during the next three seasons, judging from reports that continue to come in from the South Bend University. Mike Layden, brother of Elmer, the Duquesne coach of Four Horsemen renown, looms as a future star.

Mike Layden

Mike stood out as one of the best bets on the freshman squad this last season. Taller and heavier than Elmer, he has made such an impression as a blocker at a school that specializes in knock-'em-dead interferers that he is being hailed as a second edition of Marty Brill.

---

THE YOUNGER LAYDEN admittedly has a great big job on his hands in trying to keep the family name up to the lofty mark set by Elmer, but football men agree that following in the footsteps of a famous brother is not as difficult as living up to a noted father's reputation. Few sons have duplicated the exploits of their dads on the gridiron, as witness such failures as the Camps, Hestons, Staggs, Yosts, Thompsons and others. But brothers have sparkled contemporaneously or in turn, in numbers ranging from two to five. There were the Poes, the Millers, the Joneses, the Hinkeys, the Coys, the Pierces, the Callahans, the Barrons, the Crowes, the Hallowells, the Wilsons, the Wendells, the Taussigs, the Drapers, the Wheelers, the Traffords, the Vidals, the Youngs and countless others. So it is strongly possible that the Laydens will be added. A brother and a cousin of Frank Carideo also will try for the Notre Dame varsity next fall, but the cousin is said to be the better prospect.

FRANK BROIDA, GOODMAN LEAD IN DOUBLES

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

For the second time in as many years, Dr. John O'Loughlin, ace of the P. A. A., tops all rivals in official men's singles ranking of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association. Inasmuch as compilation of the district ratings was inaugurated only a twelvemonth ago, the agile Winged Header's record in this respect is a couple of hundred per cent perfect.

First position on the men's doubles list goes to Frank Broida and Irvin Goodman, youthful Harvard-Pitt pair, who bagged honors of the Westmoreland County and the Fox Chapel tourneys here last summer. Announcement of the racquet standings was released by radio last evening by Ranking Committee Chairman Robert C. Schmertz over Station WCAE as feature of the weekly Trained Seals' broadcast of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph sports department.

O'LOUGHLIN UNDEFEATED

O'Loughlin landed distinction by virtue of having gone undefeated by an opponent from P. T. A. territory in the course of 21 matches. B. F. Arkle, Wheeling star, accorded the Steel Citian his lone man-to-man reversal of the campaign in the Western Pennsylvania titular final at Stanton Heights late in June. The P. A. A. luminary later annexed the Westmoreland County, the Western Maryland, the Morgantown Country Club invitation, and the Stanton Heights invitation trophies in brilliant fashion. He maintained unblemished his astonishing inter-team play mark by reeling off his eighth season without defeat as a member of the Winged Head squad and all in all flashed the soundest, most impressive tennis of his career.

The premier's brother, Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, grabbed off the number two post once more, while the third member of the ex-Westmont clan, Billy, moved ahead several notches to fourth, one stage to the rear of Sam Harbison, Edgewood crack from Sewickley. Another Sewickleyite, Paul Barber, crashed into the picture at fifth. The P. T. A. "Upper 10:"

1—Dr. John L. O'Loughlin, P. A. A.
2—Dr. David L. O'Loughlin, P. A. A.
3—Sam Harbison, Edgewood.
4—William L. O'Loughlin, P. A. A.
5—Paul Barber, University Club.
6—Edgar Alcorn, Mt. Lebanon.
7—W. McCook Reed, Edgewood.
8—Frank S. McClintock, University Club.
9—Frank S. Smith, Edgewood.
10—W. Russell Unger, Mt. Lebanon.

SECOND TEN CHOSEN

Adhering to precedent, the committee chose a second set of satellites, but without attempt to align them in order. This group, listed alphabetically, is comprised of John D. Beatty, Stanton Heights; Ben Bloom, Shannopin; Frank Broida, Pittsburgh Parks champion; William Clardy, Westinghouse; John Hecker, Beaver Falls; George D. Henderson, Stanton Heights; Paul DeF. Hicks, Edgewood; Robert Lampus, Shannopin; Charles Lockhart, Edgewood, and Leonard W. Reed, Edgewood.

The doubles ranking, a new departure this year, was limited to five combinations:

1—Frank Broida and Irvin Goodman, Harvard-Shannopin.
2—Dr. William S. McElroy and Dr. David O'Loughlin, P. A. A.
3—Charles Lockhart and Sam Harbison, Edgewood.
4—Dr. David O'Loughlin and Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A.
5—Paul Hicks and McCook Reed, Edgewood.

In the course of his talk on the air, Chairman Schmertz stated that only players residing in Pennsylvania within a 50-mile radius of Pittsburgh were considered for ranking, and that calculations were based upon the showings of contestants in the Western Pennsylvania, Westmoreland County, Beaver County, and the Pittsburgh Parks championships, the Stanton Heights, Pittsburgh Golf Club, Allegheny Country Club and Fox Chapel Golf Club invitation tournaments, and the team matches of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League.

LEADERS OPTIMISTIC

Both Schmertz and P. T. A. President J. Phillips Davis, who followed him at the microphone, sounded optimistic notes upon the subject of 1932 and 1933 tennis in the Pittsburgh area.

Along with Schmertz and Davis on the Trained Seals' bill were Harry Keck, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph sports editor; Ralph Federer, radio pianist; Herb McGee, popular announcer, and Paul Sullivan, P. T. A. secretary.

LONDOS VICTOR

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Jim Londos successfully defended his claims to the heavyweight wrestling title last night when he won from Everett Marshall, of La Junta, Col., in one hour, 12 minutes, 24 seconds. Londos was awarded the decision on an "unconscious" hold, described as having the victim's arm raised above his head in chancery. Londos weighed 202, Marshall 215.

Recently he played 21 games at the National Chess Club, and, on the following day, called off every move—more than 1,500—without error. He emerged with 12 wins, four losses and five draws. At present, Dr. Alekhine is touring the United States in a series of exhibition games. ## PITT TANKERS SET RECORD

One A. M. A. record was twice shattered and two women and one male champion crowned as crack swimmers of the district churned the waters of the Keystone Athletic Club pool in the first championship indoor meet of the season last night.

Pitt's relay team, composed of Herman Addlesburg, Williard Norton, Jack Denny and Russell Lindberg, set a new mark in a trial heat of the 400-yard relay, covering the distance in 3:55.4, and then came back in the final to crack this mark in 3:54.4. The old mark was 3:59.4.

Miss Louise Clark, of the Carnegie Library Club of Homestead, won the A. M. A. senior 100-yard breast stroke title, and Miss Trudy Buerkle, of the K. A. C., captured the A. M. A. junior 100-yard free style championship, tying the listed record of 1:13.2 for the event.

Bob McTiernan, of the Willows Pool Club, outdoor A. M. A. champion, won the indoor low-board diving title. The summary:

100-yard junior A. M. A. free style for women—First heat: Mary Barnes, Carnegie Library Club, Homestead, first; Ethel Fagan, Carnegie Library Club, Homestead, second. Time, 1:16 1-5.

McNeish, Trojan Back, Former Sharon Lad

SHARON, Pa., Jan. 19.—While the Pitt Panthers' countless supporters in this district writhed in agony as Southern California pummeled the Pittsburghers in the Rose Bowl game, the disappointment of a lot of Sharon folks was tempered in the knowledge that a sturdy athlete of strong Sharon connections was a part of the victorious team.

Young Bob McNeish III, left halfback of the Trojan eleven, is the son of Bob McNeish II, a prominent resident of Sharon before he took his family to Los Angeles. Young Bob's mother was Miss Nell Gilkey, daughter of Constable Gilkey, of West Middlesex. The stellar athlete and his parents last August came back for a long visit with the home folks.

Bob McNeish

So, while Sharon fans as a whole were keyed up about Mike Sebastian and his Pitt buddies, not a few were expectant every time Bob McNeish carried the pigskin.

If Bob takes after his dad, local fans do not need any further evidence as to the toughness of the Southern Cal boys. Bob, the second, would have been graduated with the Sharon High School class of 1907 had he remained in school, but, when he wasn't engaged in fisticuffs with other "hard-boiled" kids, he often could be found on the front end of an exciting chase with the late Johnny Mason, the swiftest truant officer Mercer County has had. Apparently, Young Bob comes by his speed naturally, although his dad hardly was aware when he fled from the fast-stepping Johnny that he was to be the father of a great running halfback.

Young Bob's parent was about 6 feet in height and tipped the beam at 190. School life became too tame for him, so, before he was ready to graduate, he matriculated in that well-known and practical college—the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was warehouse foreman here when he married Miss Gilkey, and soon afterward they moved to the far west. The athlete's father is connected with the fire department of Los Angeles.

The gridder's grandfather on his dad's side was the owner of a flour mill which operated in Sharon for many years. His maternal granddad at West Middlesex, watches his career with great interest.

SCHOOLS FORM HOCKEY LOOP

It remained for the high schools to furnish Pittsburgh hockey entertainment for the winter.

At a meeting held in Duquesne Garden last night, with Shady Side Academy, Arnold School, Central Catholic, Dormont, Bellevue, Crafton, Mt. Lebanon and Etna High schools represented the County High School Hockey League was organized. A schedule will be drawn up later.

The league, under present plans, will be divided into two groups, with Shady Side, Arnold, Central Catholic and Dormont forming one group and the remaining schools comprising the other.

Coaches were named to direct the training of the teams. Frank McSorley will tutor the boys at Dormont, Pinky Martin will be in charge at Central Catholic, Frank Richardson will coach at Shady Side and Terry McGovern at Arnold.

Carnegie Tech is planning to form a varsity ice team. Tech candidates will report for a workout Saturday morning and if a team can be formed the Tartans may book games with Eastern teams.

Chevigny to Coach At St. Edward's U.

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Jack Chevigny, of Notre Dame football fame, has deserted the big time professionals for the small college field.

On February 1 he will take over the coaching duties of St. Edwards' University, of Austin, Tex. His appointment was announced last night by the Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, C. S. C., president of the university.

Last season, Chevigny was made head coach of the Chicago Cardinals of the National Professional Football League, but injuries beset his team throughout the campaign and a poor record was made.

PANTHERS WIN OVER TARTANS BY 30-24

By JESS CARVER

Pitt's Golden Panthers of basketball, who play a right nifty brand of ball, are riding along at the head of the Intercollegiate Conference pack today with three victories in as many starts. They were boosted to this commanding position last night through the efforts of a couple Dons, and not Spanish ones, either, Capt. Don Smith, forward, and Don McCamant, guard, who led the Cats to a 30-to-24 triumph over Carnegie Tech, before 2,500 fans in the Tech gym.

Don Smith

The contest, the first of the annual series between the Pitts and Techs, marked the forty-sixth renewal of the 25-year-old series, brought to the Panthers their thirty-ninth victory and their sixteenth in a row over the Plaid.

Pitt's leader, Smith, turned in as brilliant an exhibition of individual play as has been seen in this city since Charley Hyatt used to beat 'em single-handed. Smitty only scored six points, but his floor work was admirable. He was on the ball all night, intercepting Tech passes, pilfering the ball from over-eager Tartan dribblers and was ever a threat under the hoop.

TECH'S FIRST DEFEAT

The defeat was the first of the season for the Plaid and was decisive enough. Pitt swept away to a 17 to 12 lead at the half and managed to stay out in front of the hard-trying, but decidedly inaccurate Tartans throughout the second 20 minutes of action. Tech's marksmanship was away off last night. The Plaid accounted for only three field goals during the first 32 minutes of play, all in the first half. Then they added four during the last eight minutes.

While Smitty was playing his sensational floor game, McCamant was attending to the gathering in of points. He shipped five field goals through the hoop and was good on two out of three tries at the charity line for a total of 12 points. Bob Smith, Tech's husky forward star, trailed in the race for individual honors and led his team in scoring with 10 markers. He gathered three field goals and four fouls.

CRIBBS IN UNIFORM

Pitt's injured center star, Claire Cribbs, was in uniform but did not get into the game. Red Silverman, Tartan guard, with his shoulder in a cast, was a press row visitor, and turned in as fine a job of experting as ever has caused the scribes to get their score sheets balled up.

Pitt's chief weakness last night was at the foul line, where the Panthers missed out on eight out of 14 tries. Tech, on the other hand, had a very profitable evening with free ones, sinking 10 out of 13. The lineup:

| Pitt. | G. | F. | Pt. | Carnegie. | G. | F. | Pt. |

Dukes Face Alumni

The Old-Timers, of Duquesne University (and how their ire will be aroused by that Old-Timer crack), who helped make basketball history during their respective sojourns on the Bluff, will square off against this year's varsity team tonight in the annual alumni-varsity game. It will be one of those games in which both the flesh and spirit on one side will be willing and able, with only the spirit to bulwark the other.

In a preliminary, which looks like the most attractive game of the two, the members of the athletic department will battle a team selected from the university's alumni board of governors.

CHICAGO FIGHT UNDER WAY—TUNNEY TELLS STORY

GENE ALMOST SCORES QUICK KNOCKOUT

SYNOPSIS

The return battle between Tunney and Dempsey is right at hand with Chicago and most of the sports world agitated by "manipulation" gossip and sensational canards. Camp and boxing commission conferences discuss ring regulations in detail, including that special and most significant knockdown neutral corner rule. It's the night of September 22, 1927 . . . The principals are getting ready to march to the ring in the vast, crowded Soldier Field arena.

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

In the dressing-room the bandaging of my hands was watched by Gus Wilson and another Dempsey follower. I had argued for weeks to have the bandaging done in the ring, as it had been done in Philadelphia and for which a provision had been inserted in the contract between Rickard and me. I was overruled by Leo Flynn and the commission. Game little Jimmy Bronson had been advised that he was persona non grata with the Dempsey camp, and that if he came over to Dempsey's dressing-room to watch the bandaging for me he would be assaulted. Jimmy did not mind taking the chance, but Gibson insisted that he take Capt. Mike Grady with his—"just in case."

Gene Tunney

So Jimmy went to Dempsey's dressing-room, Mike Grady and Lou Brix with him. Someone had given orders that Jimmy be kept out, and, to be sure that these orders were followed, assigned one Sergt. Tappscott, of the Chicago police, who had been appointed Dempsey's bodyguard, to see to it. Tappscott made a brave showing, glowering at Jimmy. He was in the process of telling Bronson just what would happen to him if he persisted in entering.

"Listen, flatfoot, said Grady, jabbing a large finger into Tappscott's chest. "I'm giving you your choice: either shut your face or I'll——"

His right hand moved toward his hip. Tappscott looked at him hard.

"Yeah," went on Grady, pointing to a tiny ventilation window high up near the ceiling—"yeah, shut up or I'll make you climb out through that window. See?"

Tappscott saw. And Jimmy Bronson with Lou Brix watched Dempsey's hands being bandaged.

Through some mistake in the signals, I kept Jack waiting in the ring a couple of minutes. This was unintentional. Jack greeted me as I entered the ring:

"How are you, Gene?"

"Quite well, Jack, and you?"

Soon after my arrival, the announcer bellowed what had been printed a million times—

"This is a fight for the world heavyweight championship"—and announced the principals.

REFEREE—DAVE BARRY!

I was standing in my corner and made the usual gesture in acknowledgment of the cheers and jeers. Suddenly a gray-haired man, whom I had before never seen to my knowledge, climbed through the ropes and stood in a neutral corner. The announcer turned to him and shouted:

"The referee, Dave Barry!"

My heart dropped into my stomach. Dave Barry! Jimmy Bronson's old antagonist, and the man that Jimmy warned me against permitting to referee the match! Well, now I was in for it good and plenty.

"You must make the most of it!" I told myself.

Then followed the introduction of the two judges, prominent Chicago businessmen, George Lytton and Sheldon Clark. I had never seen either of them before. We were called to the center of the ring. Flynn and Jerry the Greek stood with Dempsey; Gibson and Bronson with me. The referee said:

"Both of you boys have received a book of rules of this Boxing Commission. They are the rules under which you are going to fight. They have been discussed by your representatives, I understand, for several days at the commission."

RULE IS REPEATED

Gibson and Flynn assented to that.

"The rabbit and kidney blows are barred, of course," he continued.

We all nodded acquiescence to that.

"Now, I want to get this one point clear," continued Barry. "In the event of a knockdown, the man scoring the knockdown will go to the farthest neutral corner. Is that clear, Jack?"—turning to Dempsey—and "Is that clear, Champ?"—turning to me. We both nodded "Yes."

"Now, in the event of a knockdown, unless the boy scoring it goes to the farthest neutral corner I will not begin to count until he does. Is that clear, Jack?"

"Yes," nodded Dempsey.

"Is that clear, Champ?"

"Yes," I said.

"When I tell you to break I want you to break clean and step back without hitting—"

He paused impressively. Then: "Shake hands now and come out fighting."

THE BELL—FIGHT IS ON!

We shook hands and went back to our corners. The bell rang. We came out fighting.

In my anxiety to end the fight by a knockout, I threw and missed more rights than I ordinarily would have in 20 fights. I scored often with my left, only occasionally with my right. So did Dempsey. Dempsey, however, was fighting a considerably different fight from the one in Philadelphia. He was very cautious. Because of this I was unable to get him into positions that would make him a target. He left very few openings.

At the end of the fourth round, I finally nailed him with one of those wild rights on the temple. He staggered back into a corner. He was considerably dazed, but conscious enough to cover up. The bell rang. He went to his corner in an unsteady stride.

Sitting in my corner, I thought the end was near and that I probably would get him in the next or following round. Much to my surprise, he answered the bell for the fifth round as clear and strong as he was at the beginning.

DEMPSEY BLEEDS EARLY

"He has marvelous recuperative powers!" I thought. "Well, it is only a matter of time until he will be weakened from the loss of blood."

I had opened two cuts on his face, both of which were bleeding. The fifth round passed without much heavy damage being done, though there was considerable action. I felt I was leading by a big margin on points.

We were both fencing carefully. I was trying to maneuver him into an opening so that I could get a shot at his jaw; he was attempting to cross my left lead with a long, straight right. The sixth was similar to the fifth. My right-handers were landing high and Jack's crosscounters were either missing or grazing my jaw. At close quarters I tied him up. This, however was more to prevent his using the rabbit punch than a disinclination on my part to infight.

Tunney's vivid version of that mooted "long count" will feature tomorrow's chapter in which Gene also stresses Dempsey's use of the deadening "rabbit punch" and how that detail flashed through the champion's mind as he re-made his battle plans while listening for the referee to toll "Nine!"

POLICE UNCOVER RACE PLOT

DETROIT, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—If what Detroit police suspect is true, followers of the ponies—as well as the ponies themselves—have received some shocks that were not in the form sheets.

With the arrest of Albert Frye, 26, and Joseph Sordman, police uncovered what they believe is a nation-wide plot to clean up on race tracks by means of an electrical device enabling jockeys to deliver a galvanizing shock to lagging mounts on the homestretch. The device, one of which police said was in possession of the two men, fastens under an ordinary saddle and is operated by pressure of the jockey's knees.

Hinchman's Brother Dies in Toledo

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Harry S. Hinchman, 54, baseball player and manager who retired in 1929, died today of heart disease after an illness of two months.

He played second base in the Western League and with Kansas City, St. Paul, Toledo and Cleveland. He formerly managed the Toledo, Williamsport (Pa.), Reading (Pa.), and Waterbury (Conn.) teams.

Bill Hinchman, a brother, is a scout for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Mal Stevens Named Yale Frosh Coach

LAYTON STEALS SHOW IN CUE TOURNEY

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Johnny Layton, from Sedalia, Mo., is on the ivory war path again.

On the trail of his eleventh title, Layton launched his attack in the 1933 world's three-cushion billiard championship tournament yesterday, and before he had finished with a decisive victory he stood out as the most feared competitor in the long drive for the crown.

Opening up with a rapid-fire count of 11, he clicked off points with amazing ease and accuracy and wound up with a one-sided 50-to-8 victory over Frank Scoville, of Buffalo, N. Y., in 35 quick innings. It was the most decisive victory of the tournament so far, and, while Clarence Jackson, Detroit veteran, led the big parade with two straight triumphs, Layton stole the show.

SCOVILLE ROUTED

Scoville, the upset artist of the 1932 championship, didn't have a chance against Layton's shots. The Missouri star gained a 36-to-4 margin after 20 innings and won as he pleased, running out with a cluster of four.

Jackson soared into the lead with a far less spectacular decision, defeating Arthur Thurnblad, Chicago, 50 to 44, in 48 innings. Playing the same steady game that gave him a victory over Augie Kieckhefer, of Chicago, the defending champion, in the first match of the tournament, Jackson gained a slight lead, held it and ran out with a count of four.

Kieckhefer came back in the only contest of the night to defeat Tiff Denton, another old-timer from Kansas City, 50 to 45, in 68 innings.

COCHRAN FACES TEST

Cochran and Bozeman faced stiff opposition in today's matches, however, the former meeting Thurnblad, a tough foe at times, in the evening match, while Bozeman was paired against Otto Reiselt, the former champion from Philadelphia, this afternoon. Scoville is matched against Denton in the other match of the day.

The standings:

| | W. | L. | HR. | SO. | Pts. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Clarence Jackson | 2 | 0 | 7 | 48 | 100 |

'NOW IT CAN BE TOLD'

Lindstrom Proves Piet's Best Teacher—Tony's Feud With the Cubs

—By CHARLES J. DOYLE—

Among National League players, Tony Piet, Pirate star, is regarded as a hustler who makes practically every second base play in the proper manner. On the offense, however, there is one important action which baffled him up to the time of an impromptu meeting with Freddie Lindstrom, a past master in the manipulation of the move under consideration—the hit-and-run play.

Through most of his career, Tony found it hard to smack the sphere behind a runner after the teammate left first base. Tony studied Lindstrom carefully during a New York-Pittsburgh series. Eventually he approached Freddie and said:

"How the heck do you always manage to drive that ball behind a runner when you have the hit-and-run on?"

Freddie was not selfish, so he proceeded to give the young Pirate a lesson, stressing the foot action. Lindy employs a quick change of stance to engineer the play, and he took quite a lot of time out to demonstrate it to Piet.

Tony Piet

Early in the ensuing battle, Piet came up and found Pie Traynor on first. Tony put up the sign and Traynor started with the pitch. Bang! A line hit rattled into right field as Pie skipped to third. Later in the game Tony went up to hit with another runner on first, and again he put up the sign and blasted a hit into right. As he went to his position at the end of the inning, he heard Lindstrom remark:

"You're a pretty good student, Tony—you didn't have to burn much midnight oil learning that lesson."

Tony laughed and replied:

"Oh, I never was very good in school, Fred—maybe you're just a good teacher."

K. O.'s HARTNETT

Piet's collisions with Francis Hogan, Leo Hartnett and other big catchers left him with black and blue spots on his body through a part of last season. One of the best base runners of the game, Tony is clean in his play, but, when the big receivers refuse to give him his half of the line, he takes it through the combination of speed and power.

Piet knocked Hartnett for a loop in a hot battle in Chicago. He tried to dive over Leo, who raised his arms for the ball in time to feel the terrific impact of the Pole's body. They counted 10 over Gabby, and, when Piet came to bat, Pitcher Guy Bush threw four pitches at his head.

The feud was resumed when the Cubs came to Pittsburgh. Marvin Gudat punched Arky Vaughan in a jam play at second. Vaughan punched him back. Piet, who did not wish to be ejected, made no effort to punch anybody, but he picked up Gudat and spun him like a pin wheel.

ENGLISH SPIKES TONY

Woodie English spiked Piet in a force out at second. Many daring runners, in an effort to prevent a double play, will dive into the pivot fielder with so much force that the latter cannot make an accurate throw to first. In this instance, Piet had no chance to make a play at first and was stepping off the bag when Woodie ploughed into Tony, cutting him painfully. Piet realized he was hurt, but he did not want to give English the satisfaction of seeing him rub or touch the sore spot. Instead, he said:

"I ought to punch you in the nose, Woodie. But I want to help win this game, and if I take a sock at you I'll probably get the gate. So I guess you'll get away with that one."

Between Rounds

It's Young Face, and not Gus Face, as announced, who is boxing Joe Saling in the opening bout at the Arena on the North Side tomorrow night. Mose Butch and Ross Fields are in the windup, and Billy Holt and Ray Lyle in another 10-rounder, with Billy Clair and Walter Ketchel in the second number.

Jimmy Columbo, brother of the Clarksburg (W. Va.) boxing promoter, who meets Marty Gornick, of Whitaker, in the semi-final to the Ted Yaross-Eddie (Kid) Wolfe fight at Motor Square Monday night, also is matched for a main bout with Battling Gizzy at Clarksburg, February 3. Mickey Solomen and Carl Montebano, middleweights, box the opener at the Garden, and Max Elling and Freddie Edwards are in the second bout.

Tony Lavario, Harry Ryder and Kid Hershey, of Waterbury, Conn., would like to box here. The first two are 140-pounders and Hershey is a lightweight.

Boxing fans can't understand why Marcel Thil's N. B. A. middleweight championship was not at stake in his losing bout with Kid Tunero in Paris, Monday night, when Tunero came in under weight, while the champion was a pound heavy. Tunero won the decision in 12 rounds.

Manuel Quintero is back in training and showing improved form for his return bout with Billy Holt, featuring the reopening of the Moose Temple Arena one week from tonight. It developed Quintero was handicapped by a heavy cold in their first clash, at the Garden, when he made a bad showing in losing the decision.

The management of Sammy Paris, Hill bantamweight, has been taken over by Ray Foutts, handler of Ted Yaross, and Sammy has decided to postpone for the present his trip to the Coast for bouts. Foutts already has booked him for the second show at the Moose Temple, February 2, and is angling for another bout before that time.

An eight-round semi-final, a six-rounder and three four-round bouts will make up the preliminary card of the first show at the Moose. Jerry Clements and Johnny Dureo have been matched for the six-rounder and Johnny Woods and Shorty Washko for one of the four-rounders.

Hans Birkie and Jimmy Braddock will box the main bout in New York's Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, taking the place of the canceled Billy Petrolle-Bep Van Klaveren battle.

COMBS, GOMEZ JOIN YANKEE HOLDOUTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Earl Combs, center fielder, has joined Pitcher Lefty Gomez, First Baseman Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth in the Yankee holdout squad.

Combs never before had rejected a contract. He said today he expected no trouble in reaching a satisfactory compromise.

Gomez was understood to have been offered an increase of from $11,000 to $12,000 in pay. He said that in view of his record of 24 games won and 7 lost last season, he did not regard the boost as being sufficient.

Secretary Ed Barrow expects Gehrig to appear for a conference shortly, and is confident that salary differences will be ironed out at that time.

EARNSHAW GETS CUT

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The Examiner reports that George Earnshaw, ace pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, has written a letter to a Los Angeles friend saying he is about to quit the team because of a 75 per cent salary cut for 1933.

Earnshaw wrote he had just received notice of the slice from Connie Mack, manager.

The letter hinted that another ace of last season's Mackmen pitching staff is to be traded or sold before the season opens.

MACK DENIES BIG SLASH

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, today made light of reports that his star righthand twirler, George Earnshaw, was leaving the A's because of a 75 per cent salary cut. He said:

"Why, I haven't even mailed Earnshaw a contract.

"We haven't even discussed any terms yet and George hasn't any idea of what I'm going to offer him."

SPORT VIGNETTES

Mose Butch, Oakland bantamweight boxer, will be making a farewell appearance in his home town when he boxes Ross Fields, of Weirton, W. Va., and Cleveland, in the 10-round main bout at the Arena, on the North Side, tomorrow night. . . . He is going to leave within a few weeks for Los Angeles, where he has been "set in" for a series of bouts by his manager, Jack London, as a result of long-extended correspondence with the promoters . . . At first they didn't want any part of Mose out there, because he was a southpaw, but the moment they were given assurance that he has turned around and will be a regular feller from now on, the welcome mat was placed out on the doorstep for him. . . . The clubs can use a good Eastern bantam or two out there, where the woods are full of Mexican, Filipino and Chinese little fellows, who go over big with the fans . . . And Mose doesn't go in cold." . . . His record, includes battles with Al Brown, the world champion; Eugene Huat, who is going well on the Coast; Jimmy Thomas, Jackie Wilson, Pete Mazzeo, Freddie Hill, Marty Gold, Frisco Grande, Harry Fierro, Jackie Rodgers, Johnny Datto and Frankie Wallace, among others, and they're all good-looking names in a young fighter's record.

MOSE BUTCH

First picture of Mose Butch, local bantamweight, as an orthodox boxer. Hitherto he has been a southpaw. He performs against Ross Fields at the Arena tomorrow night. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Picture.

Not only will Butch say goodbye to Pittsburgh after tomorrow night's bout, but it also will signalize his debut as a right-handed fighter . . . And, oddly enough, they picked a southpaw to oppose him! . . . It's a funny world . . . Mose well might take time out to philosophize on this queer quirk of fortune . . . Now that he's an ex-southpaw, he probably should look down with appropriate contempt on all southpaws, but he hasn't got around to that point yet, for he's not so sure he'll like fighting in the orthodox manner . . . He has been working out as a right-hander for five or six weeks here in the gymnasium and has been getting along famously, but there's a heap of difference between fighting in the gymnasium and fighting in the ring . . . He's going to start out as a right-hander against Fields tomorrow night, and, if all goes well, will continue so right down to the end of the bout . . . However, if he finds he guessed wrong, and that he's running behind, he won't be too proud to switch to bring home the bacon . . . He doesn't want to go to the Coast with the record of having lost his last bout at home, left-handed or right-handed.

"It was funny about being matched with Fields," Mose said, in talking over his plans . . . "What could I say about fighting a southpaw? . . . All along the matchmakers have been telling my manager they can't get opponents for me because I stand the wrong way . . . All right, then—how could I switch over night and draw the southpaw line myself? . . . I hope I never have to go back to being a southpaw, for it is most unprofitable, but I always have the consolation of knowing I can go back to that style if I can't develop the opposite stance . . . I hope to be able to keep that left foot and left hand out in front of my right foot and hand throughout the Fields bout, for it will be my first test in the experiment."

The transformation of a southpaw boxer into one who is not a liability always is interesting, and many of the fans who attend tomorrow night's show will be there for no other reason than to see for themselves whether or not Mose can make the grade . . . They don't know that ever since he got the idea of switching around he has been taking pains to step off curbstones with his left foot first, kick open the front door with his left foot and get out of the bed on the wrong side every morning . . . He even holds the fork in his left hand when he cuts meat—or is it spaghetti? . . . He's been concentrating on the idea that he must be left hand and left foot forward or conscious in everything he does.

This may sound strange to the uninitiated, because a fellow who does things with his left hand generally is called a southpaw, as in baseball or football . . . A southpaw in boxing stands with his right hand and foot extended and generally is awkward to oppose . . . They call him a southpaw because he merely chops or paws with his right hand and does most of his real hitting with the left, which he brings around in sidewheeler fashion in a hook or swing to the jaw or body . . . That may not be very clear on paper, but we'll have Howard Mayberry furnish the blueprints in case you don't get the idea.

In a way, you can't blame Mose Butch, an Italian, by the bye, for wanting to pull stakes here . . . Tomorrow night's fight will be his first in almost four months . . . Meanwhile he has been training almost incessantly for bouts which have been promised but have not materialized . . . In other words, he has been getting plenty of runaround from the promoters . . . His last start was against Al Brown, the world champion, at the Garden, on September 28 . . . He didn't figure to beat the champion, and he didn't, but he gave everything he had in an earnest effort to win . . . Yet, because he didn't beat the best man in the world in his class, he hasn't been used since . . . "California, here he comes!"

—HARRY KECK.

CURRY BOOTERS TO FACE CUP TEST SUNDAY

By TOM BIRKS

Plenty of action is promised in the National challenge cup soccer game at Greenlee Field Sunday afternoon when the Cleveland Shamrocks, National amateur champions, clash with Curry, of the Keystone League, in the first round of the National eliminations.

Two seasons ago, the Shamrocks met the Shannon Zoneys in the National competition. The boys from the Buckeye State put up a wonderful game, but went down to defeat by a single goal.

Last year, the Clevelanders won the National amateur title. This aggregation, practically intact, will see duty against Curry here Sunday.

The Keystone Leaguers will have Buff Donnelli in the game at center forward. That means much against a European type of defense such as the Shamrocks employ.

Greenlee Field is in fine shape. The spacious stands will accommodate 8,000 fans. The enclosure is in within a few minutes of the downtown district, situated on Bedford avenue.

No other games will be scheduled on Sunday to offer any competition to the National fray, according to local officials.

Saturday afternoon, at Westinghouse High School field, a game between the Allegheny Valley League and the Central District League all-star teams is booked.

Tomorrow is the closing date for the West Penn open, charity and Junior competitions. Managers must get in touch with Secretary Sam Park at 641 Griffin street no later than this evening.

KID CHOCOLATE DEPORTED

KEY WEST, Fla., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Kid Chocolate, Cuban boxer, was ordered deported to Havana after a hearing before immigration officials here today because he had no permit from the Secretary of Labor to enter the United States.

The hearing was held behind closed doors.

The fighter, whose name is Eligio Sardinas Y Montalvo, was detained on his arrival yesterday, en route to New York to defend his featherweight championship against Seaman Watson in Madison Square Garden, January 27.

Louis Gutierrez, Chocolate's manager, returned to Cuba with him. He said it was the Kid's twenty-fifth trip to this country and that on no previous trips had he been required to present a Department of Labor permit. He was deported a year ago on the basis of charges filed by the father of a Cuban girl whom he married on his return to Havana.

Jackets Victors Over Grove City

GROVE CITY, Pa., Jan. 19.—Grove City's fine play, which enabled it to defeat Westminster last week in two extra periods, failed to hold good here last night and the crimson was routed by Waynesburg, 44 to 28.

Led by Rab Currie, Jacket football star, who tallied 25 points on 11 field goals and three fouls, the Jackets took a lead late in the first half and thereafter were never headed. Currie set an individual scoring record for the district with his amazing performance.

WHEAT RALLY AIDS STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The stock market derived some encouragement from wheat today.

Prices were steady at the start, and developed moderate strength after the opening of the Chicago wheat market, where prices rose about a cent a bushel in the early trading. Several stocks were carried up 1 to 2 points, but trading remained extremely sluggish.

Brokerage sentiment, as guaged by market advices, appeared to have turned rather cautious. Important elements of uncertainty were still the probable actions on the dividends of United States Steel preferred and American Telephone. The first steel company to issue its fourth quarterly report was Gulf States. Compilation from the quarterly reports indicates a loss for the year of $818,313, a sharp reduction from the loss of $976,230 in 1931. A less favorable showing, however, is indicated for the larger steel makers, which have experienced unprecedented deficits in 1932.

The United States foreign trade figures for December, showing exports of $136,000,000 and imports of $97,000,000, attracted some attention. Imports dropped relatively more sharply than exports, but this may have been in part due to lower prices for foreign goods. The decline in exports appeared moderate, in view of the usual seasonal trend. The country's foreign trade for the full year fell to the lowest levels, as measured by dollar value, since 1905.

GRAIN VALUES TURN UP

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—Upturns in Chicago grain values early today followed wheat quotations showing considerable more strength than expected. Another bullish factor was that official reports indicated no important moisture relief for drought areas of domestic winter wheat territory. Opening ¼-⅝ higher, wheat continued upgrade. Corn started at ⅛-⅜ advance and subsequently held near the initial range.

More than a cent a bushel advance in the wheat market here was shown at times. As a rule, buying on the upturns readily absorbed the offerings. Selling, however, increased at above 47½ for May, and served to bring about slackening of the upward trend. Corn and oats sympathized with wheat strength. Provisions were steadied by hog market upturns.

OBSERVER SEES SOME GENUINE LIQUIDATION

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—On the whole, the stock market has been acting much as expected. It sold off sharply Monday, recovered fractionally on Tuesday, and resumed the decline yesterday.

Short covering appears to have been the chief factor in any rallying tendencies. Continued absence of general liquidation pressure has kept the decline moderate.

It may well be that the short account has become so cautious that it is "purging" itself as the reaction goes on. Unless a weak short interest has been built up, which seems doubtful, I would expect somewhat lower prices.

WEAK SPOTS CONTINUE

As to the absence of general liquidation, one must note that weak spots continue to crop out and that in these cases there seems to be some real liquidation.

Some days ago it was Procter & Gamble, and Loew's. Yesterday saw Woolworth and several other merchandising stocks weak. National Biscuit, National Dairy Products and Gillette also showed evidences of liquidation.

At least, one may well say that we find in such cases some answer to those who maintain that the market has thoroughly discounted everything. Evidently the store and dairy stocks had not.

MARKET "TURNS DULL"

Such evidence as volume of trading gives, can be—and is—cited by both bulls and bears as favorable to their respective positions. The market has "turned dull" both on hour-to-hour declines and hour-to-hour advances.

The daily totals, however, tend to support the bears, as the volume has moved opposite to prices on each of the last three days. The way trading dried up on attempts at a rally Tuesday was most obvious.

Aside from the "dullness" argument and the idea that the worst has been discounted, the bulls appear to rely chiefly upon hopes of inflation and upon the few relatively favorable earnings reports which always come out early.

The bears reply that inflation has not come and may not. If it does it will be in the vicious form of depreciated currency. As to earnings, they point to the soundness of most utility earnings, and to the fact that many leading stocks look very high on a price-earning basis.

BOND MART WEAK

It must be admitted that the bond market has turned weak.

The oil trade remains unsettled and seems inclined to a gloomy view, with production up and gasoline prices weak.

The rail stocks have lost the leadership they had on the advance. The recent utterances from Washington to the effect that waterway improvements must go on regardless of railways, and the growing discussion about rail rates being too high, are hardly encouraging to investors in the carrier stocks.

I do not feel that the market has had a sufficient reaction to put it in a strong position. But it can be said that the averages have lost the proverbial "50 per cent" of the recent rally, and maybe a little more resistance to the decline, with some feeble rally, may be a reasonable expectation soon.

The technical position, however, would look better if we could have one more sell-off with greater volume.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Uncertainty again prevailed in the bond market today and prices mulled about over an extremely irregular range. While United States government securities continued yesterday's rally, most domestic corporation and foreign issues failed to get much of a foothold on the recovery ladder.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today, were as follows (000 omitted in sales column). United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

MARY FAITH

Story of a Girl With Husband Who Wouldn't Grow Up

By BEATRICE BURTON

Kim Admits Being at Fault And Makes Apology To Mary Faith

CHAPTER XXXV.

At noon he came home. He had a sore throat and a headache, he said. His hands were hot and dry and his gray eyes glittered with fever.

As she helped him off with his clothes Mary Faith observed that he had bought himself a new shirt and a new blue and white polka-dotted tie. He had been wearing polka-dotted ties exclusively the last few weeks. Evidently the blonde girl in the drug store admired polka dots.

"The things a wife finds out about the woman her husband cares for!" Mary Faith thought bitterly as she closed the top drawer of Kim's dresser upon the tie.

Mary Faith's indignation vanished when she saw that he was sick.

"Oh, gosh, but I'm glad to be here," he sighed as she helped him to bed. "No place like this, Mary Faith—"

She went out into the hall and telephoned Dr. Thatcher.

"Kim's sick," she told Mrs. Farrell, who was just coming in from a trip to the library, bringing four books and a box of licorice drops. "I've telephoned for the doctor. It's best to be on the safe side."

DOCTOR PRESCRIBES

"Oh, absolutely!" agreed Mrs. Farrell. She was all agog at the thought of seeing Dr. Thatcher. By the time the doctor arrived, she had changed into a clean house dress and had established herself in a chair at Kim's bedside, where she sat looking much too large for the small, neat room.

"Well, doctor, what's wrong with our boy? Just a little touch of sore throat, I imagine," she said comfortably, when Dr. Thatcher had gone over Kim's chest with a stethoscope. "He's always having a sore throat, you know."

But Dr. Thatcher said it was not sore throat this time, but acute bronchitis. He looked gravely at Mary Faith when he said it.

"Keep the room warm and open the windows from the top, so that there'll be plenty of fresh air, Mrs. Kim. And don't let this fellow smoke or have anything but water and broth and orange juice. I'll send up some medicine."

His orders sounded simple enough, but Mary Faith found them anything but simple to carry out. For Mrs. Farrell opposed her at every turn. When Mary Faith opened the windows from the top, she closed them.

KIM APOLOGIZES

"Who ever heard of letting cold air blow in on a sick person?" she wanted to know. And she was all for giving Kim a sweet thick eggnog, instead of orange juice.

"An eggnog never hurt anybody," she declared and went on mixing one in a tall glass. "Besides Dr. Thatcher used to order them for Kimberley when he was a little boy."

"That was 20 years ago and doctors have changed their ideas of diet and treatments since then," Mary Faith pointed out. But she might have saved her breath, for Mrs. Farrell paid no attention to her.

And so things went on for a week, with Mary Faith doing her best to carry out the doctor's orders and Mrs. Farrell doing her best to thwart her at every turn. But at the end of the week, in spite of all this, Kim was better. He got up for Sunday dinner and afterward sat before the fire and read the papers, until 4 o'clock.

"I'm going to run around the block," Mary Faith told him. "I need some air and exercise. I won't be gone 10 minutes."

She leaned over him to kiss him.

"You've been an awfully good patient, Kim."

He caught her hands and held them tight. "I've been a rotten husband for the last month or so, Mary Faith. I've worried you. I'm sorry."

CLAIRE RETURNS

That was all he said, but Mary Faith knew that it meant a great deal, coming from Kim, who hardly ever admitted that he had been in the wrong about anything; and her heart was as light as the dry leaves that danced along the sidewalks ahead of her as she walked briskly around the block.

There was a light in the vestibule of the building when she came back, and just outside the door of her own apartment stood a slim, young woman in a gray squirrel coat. She swung 'round as Mary Faith appeared.

"Mary Faith Farrell!"

It was Claire Maldon, thinner than ever, more shrill of voice, her face more thickly covered with powder and rouge and lipstick.

"Or perhaps she just strikes me as being like that because I haven't seen her in such a long time," mused Mary Faith.

The sitting room was very quiet and orderly in the twilight. The red coals glowed in the grate and the rose-geraniums on the window sill filled the place with their warm, spicy perfume.

"Jack tells me that Sandy's been sick," Claire said, throwing her coat back on her shoulders and lighting the cigaret that seemed to be as much a part of her as the red salve on her lips or the enamel on her fingernails.

Mary Faith nodded. "He has. I'll go back now, if you'll excuse me, and see if he's all right. Sit down and make yourself comfy, Claire."

"Ask him if he's too sick to see an old friend for a minute." Claire's voice floated after her as she went softly through the dark dining room. "I'd certainly like to say 'hello' to him."

"That's what she came here for," thought Mary Faith. When she returned to the sitting room, Claire had turned on the lights. She had taken off her hat and was standing before the mirror, touching the yellow waves of her hair with a pocket comb.

"May I see him?"

"He's asleep."

HAD BEEN SEPARATED

Claire shrugged her slender shoulders and flopped into Kim's chair. "So was Jack when I started over here," she said. "I left him snoring in his chair. You know that we had been separated these last three or four months, didn't you?"

Her keen eyes studied Mary Faith fixedly through a haze of cigaret smoke.

"You look awfully tired and old," she said suddenly before Mary Faith had had time to answer her. "You're a fool to stay at home all the time and slave the way you do. I know Sandy's been sick, and I know you have a baby to look after, but you ought to think of yourself first of all. The more selfish a woman is, the more a man thinks of her. You probably don't believe that, but you will before you die."

Then she went on talking about herself and Jack.

"I only came back home to see if I can stand living with Jack again. I'm going to try it for a month or so and if I don't get along with him better than I have in the past, I'm going to divorce him. You think I'm dreadful to say that, don't you, Mary Faith?"

Mary Faith moved uneasily in her chair, not knowing what to say. "I always thought you and Jack got along very well," was what she finally managed to blurt out.

"All of our friends thought that. All but Sandy. He lived in the same house with us and he knew that we didn't get along at all." A little smile slid across Claire's face, as if a pleasant thought had come into her mind.

TWO OF A KIND

"Sandy's like me, Mary Faith. He likes plenty of zippo all the time. And Jack's your kind of person. He actually likes to stay at home and read or putter around. If things in this crazy world were arranged the way they ought to be arranged, you'd have married Jack, Mary Faith, and I'd be Sandy's little better half."

She laughed as if she had just cracked a splendid joke, and Mary Faith smiled at her as if she saw the joke and thought it mildly funny, too. But she didn't think it was funny at all.

"How could she even think such a beastly thing?" she asked herself as Claire went away, calling over her shoulder that they must all spend New Years Eve together, and that she hoped Sandy would soon be better, and that Mary Faith must be sure to tell him that she had come to see him while he slept.

"I thought I heard that Maldon woman in here—that's why I didn't come in," said Mrs. Farrell from the doorway of the dining room as soon as the door had closed upon Claire. "Oh, what a voice she has! And the way she runs on about Kimberley. She's in love with him, mark my words. I've said so before and I say so again."

Mary Faith hardly thought of Claire in the next few weeks. Aunt Ella came up from Garrettsville to do her Christmas shopping, and Mary Faith went with her on two snowy afternoons, bringing home packages and an armful of evergreens and holly on each occasion.

Mr. McIntrae had turned over a very important case to Kim—a case that had to do with the breaking of a will. Kim worked and worried over it, and two or three times he telephoned Mary Faith that he wouldn't be home for dinner, and that if she wanted him, he would be at the office.

"Don't call me unless it's necessary," he said. "And if I'm not here, it's because I'm either on my way home or having something to eat in a restaurant—alone. Alone, do you understand?"

"Oh, Kim, don't rub it into me that I'm a jealous, suspicious wife. You know I trust you even if I am jealous."

She did. She never called up the office on the nights he was not at home.

Christmas was a complete success. A regular story-book snowstorm had wrapped Wilton street in the whiteness of a

Now Go On

"Sandy's like me, Mary Faith," said Claire.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Saturday, the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters-East Liberty Division of the Junior Komic Club will begin holding regular meetings at the Enright Theater instead of at the Sheridan Square. Manager Frank E. Roberts, of the Enright, will greet the kiddies with the "welcome home again" spirit. Speaking of Saturday's meeting, Manager Roberts said yesterday:

For the return of the Komic Club to the Enright Saturday much novel entertainment is promised to the kiddies. There will be a pet show open to both boys and girls. When we say "pets," we mean "pets." We want the children to bring every conceivable kind of pet they may have at home, be it dog, cat, canary, bird, turtle, or "what have you." "Blue Ribbons" as well as merchandise prizes will be awarded to the winners. A second feature is an old coin contest in conjunction with the feature picture, "Silver Dollar." Members are requested to bring any real old coins they may have at home—pennies, nickels, dimes—anything. To each of the three bringing the oldest coins, will be awarded a pair of Enright guest tickets that the winners may take home for their parents' use. A third feature will be the good old Enright Dancing School, and last but not least, a stage show featuring Freddie Kelly, Jane Neff and the Evans Sisters.

MANOR NEWS

Jack Bauer, of Barlett street, has just returned from his trip to Chicago. Jack went to visit his grandmother.

Elise Kann, of Fair Oaks street is expected to return to school next week. Elise has been out of school for the past three weeks suffering from pneumonia.

Maxine Rauch, a former member of the Manor Chapter, has moved to South Bend, Ind., although her sister, Helen, is still going to live here.

Irma Levinson has returned to school after a week's stay at home. She was nursing a severe cold.

Three popular members of our club, Jean Tenenbaum, Marcelle Rice and Myrille Nevins have started a fad. Jean is saving pictures only of Frederic March. Marcelle is saving pictures of Clark Gable and Myrille of Slim Summerville. If anybody wants to contribute to their collection, they should get in touch with these girls.

Elise Kann, a very popular member of the Manor Chapter, who has been ill for the past two weeks, is expected to attend the Manor meeting next week.

Evelyn Parker, "official Junior Reporter," held a very successful bridge at her home on Saturday evening. Among the members who attended were Jean Schwarty, Myrille Nevins, Marcelle Rice, Jean Tenenbaum, Florence Rutterberg, Rose Rosen, Ryna Mates, Helen Rauch, Betty Kann and Millie Cohen.

Rose Lichstein, a former member of the Manor Chapter, has moved to New York.

Jack Lennox, of Hobart street, was injured recently while riding his bicycle. All the members wish him a speedy recovery.

Bugs Baer

I Knew Him When—

When a new manager goes into the White House we can look forward to hearing from the following sterling characters:

Aunt Minnie who bakes those gorgeous apple pies with a double crust like a baby tank.

His former schoolmaster who says he was an ideal boy when you were looking at him.

Elmer, the old playmate, who once punched the President on the snozzle at the age of seven. Of course, the prexy didn't have his Army and Navy with him at the time. Elmer always shows up around this phase of the administration. Caesar had his Brutus and a new President always has his Elmer.

Little Tillie Stringsaver, who was his schooldays sweetheart. Tillie had freckles, pigtails and a tooth. When the future President's family moved closer to the railroad tracks, Tillie married a man named Urffwallow in later days. But she still treasures the empty tomato can the President gave her on her third birthday.

The man who gave him his first job carrying water for the elephants to squirt on innocent bystanders. Even in those early days his first employer saw the genius shining through the mosquito netting.

His college chum who shared the football stadium with him will also be around in a few minutes. He will laugh for the news reels as he tells how the young executive used to put carpet tacks in the dean's toupee and then slap the old timer over the head with a bed slat.

Zeb Powchow, the trapper and fisher, will tell everybody how they escaped an Alaskan blizzard by going to Florida for the winter. It was touch and go. Zeb made the touch and away he went first class.

The village constable is sure to remember the Halloween the boys put the tick-tack on the Mayor's windshield, carried away the gates to the jailhouse and had a lot of boyish fun while it lasted. Charming little creatures, those future Presidents.

In addition, there will be a lot of townies who always remember something about our President if he doesn't remember them with a government job.

TAKE THEM AND HOLD THEM CLOSE TO YOUR HEART

Every day—yes, every hour, every minute—our Research & Big Brother Department is petitioned by pitiful pleas from wholesome citizens who whine for help in obtaining clippings for their Scrap Books. It is pathetic to see big, strong men of affairs stand in line during the noon hour to get to our Research Department window. Often these human hulks are brave and stoical until they reach the window. Then they break—and you should see them heave with emotion as they sob like children and beg for scraps for their scrapbooks. Consequently, we have decided to issue scrapbook morsels in convenient form for clipping and pasting. Take, then, these clippings and keep them to read over and over.

National Safety and Prosperity Demand Adequate Merchant Marine

NEARLY three-fourths of the earth's surface is sea. The greatest commerce is sea-borne commerce.

The force which has had the most profound and far-reaching effect upon the fate of nations is sea power. The nations which have played the great roles in history have been maritime nations.

The United States by virtue of its geographical position is marked out to be a leading maritime power.

With its extended coast lines on both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and the outlook of its gulf states upon the southern seas, it is clearly destined for all time to be akin to the sea—using intimately and profitably for its natural growth and advancement the trade routes and the ocean highways of the world.

And yet, as a people, we have been wayward and inconstant in the presence of this manifest destiny.

In the early days of the republic, the Americans were great shipbuilders and great sailors. Every sea knew our flag. American vessels were the fleetest and the best.

Our interest in shipping kept pace with our growth in population and territory. In 1860, American ships carried nearly eighty per cent of all our foreign commerce.

THEN came the ship of steel. We had not reached the stage of industrial development which would have enabled us successfully to match it and our wooden fleet disappeared. The interest of our people, furthermore, seemed to be turned from the sea to the more enticing opportunities for business expansion which were seen in the opening up of our vast western domain.

Our carrying trade was taken over by the ships of England, Germany, France, Norway and other foreign countries.

In 1914, instead of eighty per cent of our foreign commerce being borne in American ships as in 1860, only ten per cent of our foreign trade was carried in American vessels.

The great war found us without a merchant marine deserving of the name—without merchant ships to support our navy—without the requisite tonnage to transport our troops or their supplies.

In an hour of supreme emergency, we found our ability to make war dependent upon the merchant shipping of our allies.

Then, for the first time, we realized how short-sighted had been our persistent refusal for half a century to appropriate even the moderate sums that would have maintained our merchant marine upon a respectable footing.

THERE was nothing for us to do but to turn our energies and our resources, without reckoning the cost, into a frenzied and intensive program of shipbuilding, to repair the reckless neglect of the years that had passed.

Before we got through, the United States had expended, in round figures, THREE AND ONE-HALF BILLIONS OF DOLLARS in the construction of an emergency fleet of transports and cargo carriers, chiefly the latter.

The annual interest on this great sum at three per cent is from TEN TO TWENTY TIMES the annual expenditure which would have been necessary under an enlightened policy of encouragement and support for our merchant marine.

But for our refusal to make such a moderate outlay we would, at the war's outbreak, have had a merchant marine capable of serving the nation's needs and, what is more to the point, obviating the huge and wasteful war-time expenditure.

But even this STERN LESSON was ONLY PARTLY LEARNED.

No sooner had the war ended than the fatal indifference we have shown to our merchant marine since the year 1860 began once more to manifest itself.

THE GREAT FLEET of merchant vessels which WE OWNED at the close of the war and which numbered 2,546, with an aggregate tonnage of 14,703,717—we proceeded to SCATTER, DESTROY AND GIVE AWAY.

We had not yet apparently come to a realization that there is NO FIELD for GOVERNMENT AID MORE LEGITIMATE THAN A NATION'S MERCHANT MARINE.

The opinion became prevalent that the government should GET OUT OF BUSINESS: That we could shift the responsibility for maintaining a permanent merchant marine to private enterprise exclusively.

We overlooked the fact that neither private capital, nor our people generally, had yet been educated to an appreciation of the true value of the merchant marine as an adjunct to our commerce, and a vital element in our national defense.

After several years spent in depleting the merchant marine which had been created at such great cost, public opinion swerved back to a policy of moderate encouragement of American shipping.

The result was the act of 1928, which authorized a certain liberality in the government contracts for carrying ocean mail and loans for the encouragement, within limits, of shipbuilding.

THIS act has had some beneficial effects, but it falls far short of a scientific and enlightened program for the adequate development and maintenance of a merchant marine.

The mind of the country must be lifted until it gains a proper perspective on this matter. The truth must sink into the national consciousness that A MERCHANT MARINE OF ADEQUATE PROPORTIONS is as ESSENTIAL TO OUR SECURITY as an EFFICIENT NAVY and that it is VITAL to a just EXPANSION OF OUR PEACEFUL COMMERCE.

And there is an ADDITIONAL REASON—OF COMPELLING FORCE under the conditions of today—why we should turn our energies and resources without delay into this field of constructive effort.

The BUILDING of ships, the proper MANNING OF SHIPYARDS and the NUMBERLESS ACTIVITIES OF TRADE AND COMMERCE, incidental to shipbuilding, WILL AFFORD EMPLOYMENT TO THOUSANDS OF OUR UNEMPLOYED.

THERE IS MUCH MORE TO BE SAID ON THIS SUBJECT!

It Costs Less to Live

High Salaried County Officials Can Take a Cut in Pay Without Hardship.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, United States Department of Labor, reports that the cost of living has decreased 23.5 per cent in Pittsburgh since December, 1929. Since June, 1920, it has decreased 36.8 per cent.

The 17 judges in Allegheny County who are paid $14,000 a year could take a cut of 23.5 per cent in their salaries without hardship. A reduction of that amount would bring their pay to $10,710. On $10,710 a year they could live as well as they lived on $14,000 in 1929.

Since the true measure of a salary is its buying power, the Common Pleas and Orphans' Court judges and all others whose salaries have remained unchanged while the cost of living came down have enjoyed a handsome increase in their remuneration.

The high salaried judges and the 20 other county officials drawing $10,000 or more a year should do their bit to relieve the taxpayers of part of their burden by voluntarily taking a cut in their pay. If they persist in their refusal, the Legislature should reduce their salaries.

Continue the Inquiry

The Senate Investigation of the Public Utilities Should Proceed.

The State Senate's investigation of the public utilities and their relations with the Public Service Commission is in a snarl.

Court injunctions obtained by persons and corporations that are the subject of investigation have tied the investigating committee's hands.

Three members of the committee have retired. One of the three, William S. Rial, of Westmoreland County, a "lame duck," was the chairman. A Philadelphian, Senator Thaddeus Krause, who was appointed to the committee through the influence of Senator James J. Coyne, is slated to succeed Rial as chairman.

And now comes the resignation of Senator Samuel W. Salus as a member of the committee.

While all this is discouraging, it should not be permitted to put an end to the inquiry.

Enough has already been uncovered by the probers to show that the public welfare requires that the investigation shall go on.

Evils have been disclosed that call for remedial legislation.

Suspicious transactions have been revealed—transactions that suggest the use of improper methods by the public utilities to influence Public Service Commissioners to rule in their favor in rate cases.

The Senate's duty is clear. It is its duty to fight the injunctions, to make an additional appropriation if necessary, and to prosecute the investigation with renewed vigor.

Idle Pennsylvania Land

The Barren Acres Migh Well Be Devoted to the Growing of Trees to Supply Our Lumber Needs

Statistics compiled by the Department of Forests and Waters at Harrisburg show that idle lands in Pennsylvania total 5,000,000 acres, or one-sixth of the area of the state.

The idle land, returning no revenue, is responsible for tax delinquency and a rapid increase in tax sales.

Millions of these barren acres would support forests. Much of the land is unfit for anything else but the growing of trees.

Under scientific forest management, and if protected from forest fires, the idle land could be made to supply a large part of Pennsylvania's timber requirements.

Less than 16 per cent of the lumber used in Pennsylvania is produced within the state.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 19. — No street in Manhattan seems so furtive and sinister after midnight as Lafayette. During the day it is one of the main automobile arteries to Brooklyn Bridge and that frantic downtown spread known as the financial district.

A motor accident held a group of us in its moonlit glow for more than an hour the other night. Faintly in silhouette across the way was the ghostly-gray Tombs, illuminated solely by a pin-prick of light in a bleak tower. Twice we heard the rise of a despairing moan and a rattle of bars.

Then, too, somewhere out of the void, a sustained and wracking cough, followed by a terrible blasphemy. A figure, muffled to the eyes in an ulster, slouched out of the blur. He wanted money, frankly for "a bust in the arm." From the river melancholy sirens shrieked a banshee wail.

In dim outline, too, was that famous stretch of human misery known as "The Bridge of Sighs." A little further up, drunken roysterers were skylarking in front of a Turkish bath. There was a police whistle and swift pursuit. A shriveled, shawled woman slumped against a barrel, gently snoring standing up.

Above Fourteenth street, another tragedy of night. A couple on a doorstep saying good night and, suddenly, a form appeared out of the darkness. An outraged woman—likely a wife. In the cold moonlight we thought we saw the flash of a knife. Anyway, we heard a scream.

Madison Square after 3 a. m. has the appearance of a dead stage in an empty theater. So associated is it with activity, the desolation becomes eerie. A few all-night places draw the life that is left. In one, redolent of steaming coffee, patrons were mostly young and bored ladies with hard laughs. The men were of uniform type, pale, tight-waisted. Foxes flashing across city shires. The sort peddling pornographic postcards along rue de Rivoli.

* * *

The coming of dawn seems to wash Times Square of sin and blanch it with serenity. To a casual, it is starting the jubilee jam all over again from scratch. Debauches, murders and suicides seem far away. After the phoenix fire of night sky signs, the morning pink is tremendously clear—like clean snow before humanity treads it. At 6 a. m., dawn is best. A few moment later the sun will flare into brilliance with Times Square like a fighter waiting the gong for a joust with Fate. In six hours, punch drunk, it will be wavering and shifty.

Between 3 a. m. and dawn, Reuben's offers a quick upbeat of life and celebrity splendor. A constant flow of look-at-mes in a pompous parade to dark-timbered booths. While they have the terrifying all-night energy of those taut with a tension of delirium, they are really there to shovel the latest dirt.

The New York rendezvous for bull fighters is a small restaurant called El Chico, in Sheridan square. Rodriquez, Barrara, Lalanda and Sydney Franklin are frequent visitors when in town. Other matadors, glorified in Hemingway's "Death in the Afternoon," have their autographed pictures strung on the walls. The young Spanish proprietor, Colada, brought the overworked tune, "Valencia," to America, but, failing to exercise proper copyright precautions, did not profit a penny in a transaction that might have made him rich.

El Chico's patronage is almost solely Spanish and the menu reproduction of a painting by Usabal hails the revolutionary spirit of Spain. It shows ex-King Alfonso dawdling in a glittery Paris cafe, the smoke rings of his cigaret curling into a shadowy arabesque of the commanding royal figure he might have been.

The sudden screen success, Charles Laughton, was long a frock-coated reception clerk at Claridge's in London. A consuming ambition was to register there some day as guest in a royal suite. Now that he can, he goes to a quiet little tavern near Hyde Park.

An antipathy to football was heightened by a single game last season. Sitting chilled to the bone among raving collegiates, one would have to shake me and shout: "Come on, uncle, give us a tiny yip for Harvard."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

It's twilight on the bay, with the wind setting fair from the west. An hour ago the old French tramp ship hoisted the Blue Peter from her mast head. She'll be making for sea tonight. For the last few moments the pier will be covered with scurrying workers, heaving packing cases, casting off lines. Then slowly she'll back to the outer bay with a quiver along her flanks like a thing in leash. Then three long calls of goodbye—and she's off.

Out from the harbor, as the sun goes down, away from the bustle and din of the dock, away from the murk and wrack of the sullied, inland tide, straight she will head through the clean, salt surf of the outer sea, into the sunset fire. Like a hand uplifted in farewell, she'll poise for an instant on the far horizon line—then we will see her no more.

But she will go on. She will go on into the starlit paths of the night, into the mystery and silence and far flung power of the waters. White foam of adventure will spangle her bow. Streamers of lightning will wreath her rail. In scented harbors she'll drop her hook and rest her tattered sail. Here in the harbor she will dock no more—but the troughs of the Seven Seas will part for her plunging keel.

"Blue Peter"—the little blue flag that hangs from the mast head of every ship before she hoists anchor. Blue Peter—the sign of farewell, the end of the stay in port, the beginning of the foaming trail.

Often I think of Blue Peter as old faces pass. Old faces worn and scarred by the driving winds and the searing suns of life. Gaunt, battered faces, yet still headed, like old ships, for new venturings on the open sea. And, like those ships, they hang "Blue Peter" as a sign of farewell.

Those questing eyes, so dim to all that lies landward, so early set upon a voyage that is yet to come!

That air of listening for the signal to cast off!

"Blue Peter" flutters! Soon they will be gone.

Out from the harbor as the sun goes down; away from the bustle and din of the docks; away from the murk and wrack of our sullied, earthly tide; straight through the last white barrier of roaring surf, into the sunset fire—then on, on into the night!

In the place where we saw them, we shall see them no more. But they will go on, by starlit paths, into the mystery and far flung power of the sea, into the wonder and new adventure of the dawn. And the Seven Seas which lie so far from our busy bay will know the tale of their wanderings.

You call it death—and anguish as you see the eyes grown dim?

I think it is the small, brave signal of the greater voyage yet to come.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

As a matrimonial life partner, probably you have never made any effort to become intelligent about and interested in the things that claim attention of the other person in the combination.

And then you complain when that person seeks the society of those who have kindred interests.

Congenial, satisfied life partnerships would be more prevalent and interesting if each person made an effort to become conversant with the things in which the other finds the greatest pleasure.

Naturally, if close acquaintance reveals that the husband or the wife has no real interest in the things that interest the other, human nature seeks at least a little contact with those in tune with his or her mind life.

Whereas if even passive interest had been shown it might have satisfied.

To be sure, there are those who become too much interested in their special favorite topics and will discuss nothing else—which is too bad.

Thus they become tiresome, but with married folk who wish to be "happily married" there is only one thing to do and that is try to be fifty-fifty, each in appreciating and learning about friend partner's interests.

Text For Today And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.—Revelation, xxi :4.

A Piano in Every House

There Should Be Some Musical Instrument for Every Child.

It was Henry Ford who said: "Every child should be taught to play some kind of musical instrument. Merely to LISTEN to music is not enough. Merely to ENJOY is not enough. Each should CREATE, contributing something to the pleasure of others."

Henry Ford himself plays the violin, which he prefers to call "the fiddle." And he has encouraged the manufacturer of fine instruments by buying some of the best violins in existence. He does not consider himself any Paganini, returned to life. But he plays well, and enjoys it, as everybody enjoys music produced with sincerity and enthusiasm.

The advice given by Henry Ford is a great deal older than Henry Ford, for the statement that men should create something and not merely listen appears in the Bible:

"But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only."

The talking machine, the radio that brings music from everywhere, all the various agencies for creating harmony in the home, are valuable.

But nothing takes the place of music created by the members of the family themselves, instrumental music, and singing, IN THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

A good piano should be in the center of the family group. Children's musical talent can only be known when they are encouraged to play different instruments in accordance with their inclination and ability, whether the instrument chosen be the modern saxophone which delights youth, the violin, which comes nearest to the beauty of the human voice; the 'celo, with the note of deep power that no other instrument can equal; the harp, that displays to excellent advantage the grace and beauty of the girl that plays it, or any other instrument, from the zither to the organ.

The picture published in adjoining columns will interest every mother and father.

It shows a distinguished British lady, who was formerly Miss Alice Liebman, and is now Lady Instone, the wife of Sir Samuel Instone, with her family, all musical.

The mother is at the piano, the five musical daughters near her.

The gentleman leading this beautiful orchestra, made up of the mother and her five lovely young daughters, is Sir Frederic Cowen.

This picture could be and SHOULD BE reproduced in millions of American families. Where the children have talent, and where the mother encourages it, its full development will mean happiness and a united family, literally harmonious and harmonious in spirit.

Do not let your children be "hearers only," of music.

Let your children CREATE music, give them the greatest of all joys, that of creation and ACCOMPLISHMENT.

Get the best radio that can be found, the best talking machine, the instruments that put at your disposition the greatest voices of the past and present.

But remember that nothing takes the place of music CREATED IN THE HOME.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

Love—And Learn

When it comes to making love to a woman, an ounce of enthusiasm is worth a pound of practice.

No matter how much faith a woman may have in her husband, she can't help feeling a little shiver of curiosity or anxiety, when he gets a new stenographer.

Last year's foolish little romance is always a poignant memory to a woman; but, to a man, it is as quickly and completely forgotten as last year's hay fever.

The modern girl doesn't wait for experience. She goes out and meets it half-way, takes it "on the chin," and calls it "hardening herself for life."

When a man finally gives up and tells a woman the truth and discovers how well she knows and understands him, he realizes how much ingenuity he has been wasting in trying to fool her.

When a man actually does the courting, nowadays, his words should be taken down by a stenographer and placed in the city museum, along with the other rare curios and relics of another day.

If you could mix a few cocktails with a large portion of vanity, and a half-portion of passion and spice plentifully with adventure, you'd have what most modern Romeos offer a girl as "love."

A few divorces appear to be a necessary part of the average screen star's business equipment—yet their cost is never deducted from her income tax.

Lots of men who once thought that they had to have a new car and a new heart-interest every year seem to be getting along pretty comfortably with the old model—and the old wife—nowadays.
